D.C. Firemen Demoralized By Chief, Says West Report

Many Affidavits Back 'One-Sided' Data Going Today To Commissioners

By Edward F. Ryan

A report sharply critical of Fire Chief Clement Murphy will be submitted to the District Commissioners today by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West.

Commissioner John Russell Young said the report will be given to Chief Murphy's attorney, Martin F. O'Donoghue, for review and reply. The report was described as furnishing documentary backing through affidavits of numerous individuals in support of charges that Chief Murphy had demoralized his department.

On that general charge, Chief Murphy said last night, "It isn't true."

"In view of the accomplishments and progressive methods used under my administration, I don't understand how they could demoralize a man," said Chief Murphy. "Any man that would be demoralized by increased efficiency does not belong in the service."

Commissioner Young said he does not plan to make the report public immediately.

Lid Is Snapped On

But, as word of some details filtered out, there was quick action at the District Building to keep the lid closed on the report's contents.

Commissioner Young summoned top officials of the Corporation Counsel's Office to confer with him. Meeting with Young were Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray, John J. Donnelly, Jr., Oliver Gatch, and Milton D. Korman, and Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Young.

The report was prepared by Donnelly, Gatch and Korman.

It grew out of charges by Fire Captain Joseph W. Conroy, during a District subcommittee hearing at the Capitol last June, that Chief Murphy had demoralized the department. West and other officials declined to discuss details of the report. Captain Conroy, too, declined to comment on any features of the report, saying that he had promised the Commissioners in June not to discuss the Murphy case publicly while it was being investigated.

The report was admittedly one-sided—leaving out Murphy's side—was explained variously. One report was that Commissioner Young had asked the Corporation Counsel's office not to question Murphy during the investigation of Captain Conroy's charge. Commissioner Young said he had not done that.

Officials said that as the first move after Conroy made his charge at the Capitol, Commissioner Young secured from Conroy a list

Chest to Open All-Out Drive For 3.9 Million

125 Agency Heads Will Attend 'Kickoff' Luncheon Thursday

The full-scale Community Chest Federation drive to oversubscribe its $3,900,000 goal will be launched at a "kick-off" luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Thursday in Hotel Mayflower.

Speakers will be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edward H. Foley, Jr., campaign chairman, and the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, chaplain of the Senate and pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Representatives of nine soliciting units in the campaign and presidents of the 125 Chest-supported agencies in the Greater Washington area are scheduled to attend.

Eisenhower Plans Speech

General Dwight D. Eisenhower will address another campaign rally at 4 p. m. Friday on the south steps of the Treasury Building. The Air Forces Band, led by Maj. George S. Howard, will play, and scores of notables are expected to attend.

Chairman Foley announced yesterday at a report meeting of the special gifts division revealed at the luncheon meeting in Hotel Burlington that almost 50 per cent of the unit's goals had been reported. He said 1475 pledges, totaling $517,745, had been received in all.

Government Drive Going Well

Earlier, Chest officials indicated the Government unit's drive was proceeding satisfactorily. They released the following breakdown on groups passing 100 per cent of their quotas:

Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy Department, 104 per cent; Council of Economic Advisors, White House, 102 per cent; National Capital Chapter, 100 per cent.

Oil Deal Proposal by Byrnes Revealed by Senate Probers

THE WHITE HOUSE WASHINGTON

June 14, 1941

PERSONAL & CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Jesse:

The President is anxious to find a way to do something about this matter. I am enclosing confidential correspondence from the White House so you can see what goes on. Will you return this soon as you have read it.

I am not sure what technique there are to use. It occurred to me that some of it might be done in the amendment of food direct under the Lend-Lease Bill, although just how we could call that out a "democracy" I don't know. Perhaps instead of using his royalties on oil as collateral we could use his royalties on the tips he will get in the future on the pilgrims to Mecca.

The RFC has done some funny things since that man from Houston took charge of it.

Cordially yours,

HARRY L. HOPKINS

The Honorable Jesse Jones, Administrator, Federal Loan Agency.

HOPKINS' LETTER TO JONES—This is a copy of a letter placed on record by Senator Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, in connection with yesterday's session on Arabian oil prices

Urged Roosevelt To Acquire Third of British Field for U. S.

By The Associated Press

James F. Byrnes proposed to President Roosevelt in 1943 that the United States acquire a one-third interest in a British-owned oil field in Iran (Persia) to help offset United States lend-lease to Britain, the Senate War Investigating Committee said yesterday.

Byrnes was shown to have been concerned for United States oil interests in Arabia, and the effect an alternate plan would have on them.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the committee, produced a Byrnes-to-Roosevelt memorandum on the matter, but Brewster said nothing ever came of the proposal. It also contemplated acquisition of an American interest in a 200 million dollar Anglo-Iranian pipeline.

The memorandum, obtained by the committee from White House files, was written by Byrnes October 15, 1943, when he was director of war mobilization.

Brewster also introduced a June 14, 1941, letter from the late Harry L. Hopkins to Jesse H. Jones. Hopkins was an adviser to Mr. Roosevelt and Jones then was head of the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

Referring to the 1941 financial plight of King Ibn Saud who owns the Arabian oil fields, Hopkins told Jones that Mr. Roosevelt was "anxious to find a way to do something about this matter."

Hopkins said it had occurred to him that some relief might be found through "shipment of food direct under the lend-lease bill, although just how we could call that out a 'democracy' I don't know."

Some Funny Things

In leaving a solution up to Jones, Hopkins told him:

"The RFC has done some funny things since that man from Houston took over."

Jesse Jones' home is in Houston, Tex.

Brewster put the Byrnes document force in connection with the committee's investigation aimed at finding out whether American-owned petroleum companies

Also Plans to Cut Service Fare Increases to Be Sought In D. C., Md. by Capital Transit

Capital Transit Co. said last night it will ask public utilities authorities for permission to raise fares both here and in nearby Maryland and to cut down certain service in the District.

It will also notify the Maryland Public Service Commission that it intends to discontinue the two experimental rush-hour routes between Riverdale and downtown Washington, via Mount Rainier.

These are belt-tightening measures, a spokesman said, to offset the effects of an arbitration panel's award last Friday that included a 15-cent hourly wage increase for the company's 4500 employees. CTC President E. D. Merrill has estimated the award will cost the firm $2,310,000.

Before another District fare raise is sought, a company statement said, every possible economy measure will be studied.

Vice president E. C. Giddings declared, however, that no amount of economizing will eliminate the need for a fare increase. The application will be made "only after we have exhausted our ingenuity while still preserving the service commensurate with good maintenance and safety."

It has been indicated that CTC

MacArthur Seen Ready For GOP Bid On Holy Land

Backer Indicates Early Declaration Of Candidacy For Presidency

By Robert Bruskin

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Douglas MacArthur might declare his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination before Christmas, Lansing Hoyt, leading national MacArthur supporter, indicated today.

"I am able to set down with the certainty of personal knowledge that General MacArthur will accept the Republican nomination if it is offered to him," the 62-year-old chairman of the Wisconsin MacArthur-for-President Club added.

Hoyt declined to say whether he had specific information from MacArthur.

He said the general's announcement "could come within 60 days or less."

The date for the announcement may be decided when representatives from some 15 States meet here November 15 to organize nationally to support MacArthur for the GOP nomination.

Lauds Statesmanship

Hoyt described MacArthur as the "only successful statesman we've got in America and a 'bulwark against Bolshevism.'"

MacArthur's home-State headquarters, which will become national headquarters after November 15, now is operating full blast in the Plankinton Hotel here, where the general maintains a permanent United States address.

The Wisconsin club has a nearly complete slate of 27 MacArthur delegates ready to run in the State primary April 6. Hoyt said the success of the MacArthur campaign in Wisconsin would be of paramount importance.

Delegates pledged to Gov. Thomas Dewey of New York, and Harold Stassen, former Minnesota Governor, also will enter the Wisconsin primary on the GOP ticket, where consent of a potential presidential nominee is not required.

Stassen and Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) both have declared their candidacies, but Taft announced he would stay out of the Badger primary.

In Strongest Position

"Winning in Wisconsin would place MacArthur in the strongest position for the GOP nomination at the Philadelphia convention," Hoyt declared.

He forecast a gain of 50 per cent for MacArthur over 1944 when the general received three delegates while Dewey swept the State.

Hoyt claimed backing of the Wisconsin Republican majority, 20 per cent of the Democrats and former Progressives. Former MacArthur Military Aide Phil La Follette, three-time Wisconsin Governor, was expected to be a MacArthur delegate and rally the Progressives.

National Interest Aroused in Kentucky Race for Governor

Voters today will elect a governor in Kentucky, a United States Senator and Governor in Mississippi, and three United States Representatives to fill vacancies in Indiana, Ohio and New York. Local issues predominate.

Scores of county and municipal elections will be held in other States, while in Ohio and New York veterans' bonus questions are on the ballot. A few States name State legislators.

National political leaders say they see few opportunities in the off-year balloting for gauging what might happen in 1948, a presidential election year.

Republicans have seized on the Taft-Hartley labor law as an issue in Kentucky and Indiana, but the Democrats have not discussed it.

Greatest interest from a national standpoint is concentrated on Kentucky. There, Democratic Representative Earl C. Clements is contesting with Republican State Attorney General Eldon S. Dummit for the governorship now held by Republican Simeon S. Willis. The latter is not eligible to succeed himself. He won in an upset four years ago.

Senator Barkley, Senate Democratic leader, has been making a whirlwind campaign in the latter stages for Clements, who voted against the Taft-Hartley Act and is backed by organized labor. Republicans have tried to use this vote to defeat Clements.

Stakes Include 11 Senate Seats And 22 in House

Virginia Republicans—weather permitting—are expected to make one of their strongest stands in years in today's State-wide general election.

With 11 seats at stake in State Senate contests and 22 in House of Delegates contests, Democratic leaders yesterday said they expect Republicans to capture "no more" than three House seats and one in the Senate.

Even this back-handed kind of admission is a startling announcement in Virginia, in view of Democratic machine power. Republicans now hold six seats in the House and three in the Senate.

The weather, however, will be one of the principal factors in deciding the election. Bad weather always keeps the vote down, which operates in favor of incumbent candidates.

One of the strongest Republican bids is expected in Arlington, where Talmadge Wilcher, candidate for State Senate, heads the Republican ticket. Wilcher is opposed by Democrat Charles R. Fenwick.

Estimates of the vote in Arlington, where major interest is centered on the bitterly-contested races for two county board seats and five posts on Arlington's first elected school board, ranged from 12,000 to 15,000 yesterday. Previous record county vote is the latter figure, reached in the last presidential election.

RAF Flies Polish Opposition Leader From West Germany

London, Nov. 3 (P).—Stanislaw Mikolajczyk reached refuge in London today after a dramatic flight from Poland that included a dash through Soviet-occupied Germany. He said he fled because the Communist-led Polish government planned to kill him and two associates.

"I did not want to be shot and killed like a sheep," he said.

Britain's House of Commons rocked with cheers when Foreign Undersecretary Mayhew made the announcement: "I have been informed that Mr. Mikolajczyk arrived in this country and was given leave to land."

The leader of the opposition, Winston Churchill, said he was "glad to hear of the arrival of a man of courage and conviction."

A Royal Air Force plane from Germany. He strode into a suburban house outside London, kissed the hand of the wife he left behind him more than two years ago, and recounted to more than 50 newsmen and photographers the story of his flight.

Heard of Death Plans

He left Poland on October 20 after hearing immunity would be taken away from him. Stefan Korbowski and Kasimir Bajinski. All were Peasant Party members of Parliament.

"I knew also they made plans in advance with a military court to sentence us to death," he added. Korbowski and Bajinski fled with Mikolajczyk.

"I made a decision to go away, because, after all, they would sentence us to death and our people would try to avenge us and cause unnecessary bloodshed," Mikolajczyk said.

He said he had no immediate plans for the future and declined to state whether he hoped to form an anti-Soviet bloc outside Poland or whether he would go to the United States.

Mikolajczyk said he had not seen any United States officials in Germany.

Scotland Yard officers were assigned to protect him while he is in London.

An informant said the trip from Germany was made in a plane piloted by Air Commodore O. W. De Putron, an aide-de-camp to King George.

The government has pledged that he would be given refuge in England.

Racial Taboo

'Voice of Democracy' Orators Denied Use of School Hall

The "Voice of Democracy" yesterday was bouncing off the segregation wall of Washington racial "custom and practice."

Sponsors of the high school oratorical contest, the Washington Junior Board of Commerce, reported the school system's reluctance to supply an auditorium for the contest finals.

The reason: The finalists, from eight white and three Negro senior high schools here, would comprise a mixed group. Consequently, Washington "custom and practice" will not permit the use of a public school building for this purpose.

Request for use of one of the high school auditoriums for the contest finals was made yesterday to Norman J. Nelson, first assistant superintendent in charge of white high schools for the District of Columbia.

"He suggested that we look elsewhere, that we hire a hall," reported "Ned" Candee, representing the Junior Board.

"We've had no formal request," Nelson told reporters. "But I did suggest that they get some other place to hold the finals. It just isn't the practice or the custom in Washington to hold mixed meetings."

Nelson said that contest sponsors

sored by the American Legion involving both the white and the Negro students are always run off in buildings other than public school buildings. "Some" mixed participation programs, he said, have been held here in public school buildings "and we got by without any undue fuss."

Candee, who said his organization was reluctant to hire an outside hall, said he would make formal request in writing today to Dr. Howard M. Corning.

The local contest, he explained, is one phase of a Nation-wide competition in which students prepare and deliver five-minute speeches on any subject dealing with the Bill of Rights, first amendments to the Constitution. Hence the contest title, "Voice of Democracy."

When first broached to the local Board of Education it received the school board's enthusiastic support and was unanimously voted acceptable for local school competition by the board at its October 15 meeting.

The schools involved are currently conducting elimination contests to pick their finalists.

Washington's winner will make a five-minute recording, which will be judged against recordings of State winners.

Independent Aid Agency Plan Now Shaping Up

GOP May Bypass State Department In Handling of All Foreign Relief

By Robert C. Albright

Post Reporter

A Republican program for channeling all foreign relief through an agency independent of the State Department was beginning to shape up yesterday.

The House Foreign Economic Committee, under the leadership of Vice Chairman Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), will consider a rough draft of the proposal when it meets here tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Herter is clearing details of the proposed new administrative setup with top GOP spokesmen, it was learned.

Confer With Vandenberg

Representative Herter, whose independent agency project recently received the blessing of Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), will confer today with Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

Vandenberg returned to Washington last night and beginning this morning will open a round of conferences that will do much to settle these unanswered questions:

1. Procedure. Will Congress take up the President's stop-gap aid program first and speed it to passage or try to pass both short and long range aid programs in "one bite."

2. Administration. Will Congress reject all or part of the Administration's present setup for handling relief, and put a new Government corporation in charge.

3. Amount of aid. The Administration expected to ask between six and seven billion dollars for the first year of Marshall Plan aid, over and above the amount needed for interim relief. Senator Taft has opposed relief appropriation exceeding the current rate of four and a half billions.

With the special session less than two weeks away the pattern of GOP cooperation seemed to add up to support for both short and long-range aid, but with differences in degree on amounts and administration.

The Herter Committee report as now planned may largely bypass the question of amount and concentrate on how the program should be handled.

from among five Democrats and one Republican. Democratic Gov. Fielding L. Wright has only nominal Republican opposition for election to a full four-year term as Governor. He is now filling out the term of the late Gov. Thomas L. Bailey.

Five Democratic Candidates

The senatorial race will be decided by a plurality. Of the five Democratic candidates, only one—Forrest B. Jackson, 46, who was Bilbo's personal attorney—claims a majority of the following of "The Man," who made "white supremacy" the chief issue in his campaign. Bilbo found the Senate door barred to him last January, after reelection in November, for allegedly intimidating Negro voters in the primary.

Other Democrats bidding for Bilbo's seat are Representatives John E. Rankin, Paul B. Johnson, Jr., son of a late Governor; Circuit Judge John C. Stennis, and Representative William M. Colmer. Rankin and Johnson have conducted Bilbo-type appeals to the "common man." Stennis and Colmer have aimed their campaigns largely at the vote which opposed Bilbo.

Mississippi political leaders believe 65,000 votes will be enough to name Bilbo's successor. Bilbo received 97,280 last November.

Big N. Y. Vote Expected

Highlights in other States: New York—A record off-year vote is expected, despite virtual complete agreement on the issues by the major parties.

The voters will decide the fate of a 400 million dollar veterans' bonus and five other constitutional amendments. Approval of all amendments is predicted. Forty-eight cities elect mayors.

In Arlington, Republicans have candidates for every office but sheriff. Providing the vote is large enough, they have a possibility of capturing the office of State Senator and Commonwealth's Attorney, in addition to retaining the post of county treasurer now held by Republican John Locke Green.

Ohio—Votes on 300-million-dollar veterans' bonus amendment and fills a congressional vacancy in the Fourth District caused by Republican Representative Robert F. Jones' appointment to the Federal Communications Commission.

Jewel Thieves Rob Mrs. Fahnestock's Home in London

London, Nov. 3 (AP)—Scotland Yard reported today thieves looted the home of Mrs. Betty Fahnestock, wife of a wealthy American Air Force officer, making away with jewels, clothes and furs worth about $8000.

She is the wife of U. S. Capt. Gibson Fahnestock, a former RAF bomber pilot now in Germany. (Captain Fahnestock is the grandson of Mrs. Carolyn Snowden Fahnestock, Washington and New York society leader, who before her death here 10 years ago, lived at 2311 Massachusetts ave. nw.)

The death yesterday of an incumbent on the county board, Leo C. Lloyd, will have no direct effect on today's election. Lloyd's term would have expired December 31, 1948. If Lloyd had died anytime prior to 20 days ago, under State law the Circuit Court Judge Walter T. Judge McCarthy yesterday said he was studying the problem which will require him to name someone to fill the board vacancy after the vacancy is officially certified, which will probably be at the next meeting of the board on Saturday.

charged the Navy excessive price for Arabian oil.

In his memo, Byrnes told the late President that "vigorous negotiations should be pressed with the British" for acquisition by the United States of a one-third interest in the Anglo-Iranian oil company and the proposed pipeline.

The company is owned jointly by the British government and private British interests.

Byrnes said the United States should acquire a share in the projects "in consideration of lend lease to Britain during the war."

He told Mr. Roosevelt American aid to Britain for purchase of petroleum products then aggregated 586 million dollars, and was running at the rate of 60 million dollars a month.

Byrnes advocated acquisition of an American interest in the British projects rather than development of an arrangement under which Britain would furnish crude oil to the United States.

He contended that a deal for Iranian crude oil could "seriously injure American concessions and interests in Saudi Arabia because this arrangement could practically destroy any market for Arabian oil from the American concession there."

Brewster produced the Byrnes memorandum during testimony by Fred A. Davies, a vice president of the Arabian Oil Co. (Aramco), an American firm which holds Arabian concession rights and which in turn is owned by major United States oil companies.

Aramco sold oil to the United States Navy at $1.05 a barrel. Brewster contended the price should have been 40 cents a barrel under terms of an agreement which a previous witness said was worked out with the Government.

Officials have testified that the Government never accepted the 40-cent proposal.

Brewster told Davies Aramco would not "be in the favorable position you are today" if Mr. Byrnes had not been so solicitous about your interests.

The Senator said he was "not implying any impropriety" on the part of either Byrnes or Aramco, but he added that it raised the question of whether Aramco should not have given the Navy a better price for oil than $1.05 a barrel.

"I think we made very good deals for the Government," Davies replied.

Mayors of 2 Lurays Become Pen Pals

Luray, Va., Nov. 3 (AP)—The mayor of Luray, France, has become a penpal of the mayor of Luray, Va.

The Virginia city's mayor, H. B. Dyche, said the French town's mayor, A. Desillon, has supplied him with some interesting information on the Virginia town's settlement and origin of the name "Luray."

The correspondence, Mayor Dyche said, was started several months ago.

Report Criticizing Fire Chief Going to D. C. Commissioners of individuals to be questioned on the charges he had made.

With that list for a starting point, the Corporation Council investigators quizzed firemen, police, civilians and officials.

Murphy's attorney, O'Donoghue, last month protested to the Commissioners that the Corporation Council's office deviated from the specific job assigned to it by the Commissioners, and had played the role of prosecutor rather than investigator.

It was learned that firemen who furnished affidavits to the Corporation Council also delivered copies of the affidavits to Attorney Renah F. Camaller, former counsel for the Senate District Committee. This move was said to be designed to protect individual firemen against possible reprisals.

Camaller favors publicity. Camaller said that the Corporation Council report on Chief Murphy should be made public.

"It seems to me it's a public matter which is of vital concern to the residents of the city," he said.

Most of the incidents said to have been cited in the report on Murphy dated back before he became chief of the Department in March, 1946.

One reported charge was that Murphy was drunk on duty at the Statler Hotel fire in 1941.

Murphy greeted this report with a big laugh. He said he was at the fire, and that the individuals who charged he was drunk there were "liars."

He said "that goes double" for another charge that he was drunk on duty at a laundry fire several years ago.

A Catholic University official warmly defended Captain Murphy's action in another incident said to have been cited in the Corporation Council's report. The story, in brief, was that Chief Murphy relieved a fireman from duty at a Catholic University play in January after a complaint that the fireman was drunk, and that he took no further disciplinary action.

A sharply contrasting explanation was given by the Rev. Father

Cardinal Hurl's Boycott Threat At Two Theaters

Philadelphia, Nov. 3 (AP)—Dennis Cardinal Dougherty today threatened two Philadelphia theaters exhibiting pictures classified by the National Catholic Legion of Decency as "wholly objectionable" with a one-year boycott.

In letters to William Goldman, owner of the Erlanger Theater, where Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw" is being shown, and to 20th Century Fox, Inc., owner of the Fox Theater, where "Forever Amber" is the attraction, the Cardinal said, "I shall direct all Catholics in this (Philadelphia) archdiocese to boycott (your two theaters) for one year" unless the warning is heeded in 48 hours.

The correspondence, Mayor Dyche said, was started several months ago.

300 Council Seats Scottish Vote Watched for Right Trend

London, Nov. 3 (P).—Scotland will hold its municipal elections tomorrow and British political leaders looked for signs whether voters would continue the right-wing trend that brought a strident defeat Saturday to the ruling Labor Party in English and Welsh local balloting.

Complete returns from Saturday's municipal vote in England and Wales disclosed net Conservative gains of 621 city council seats and net Labor losses of 652 seats.

Most observers agreed the Scottish voting would reflect reaction to the last year of increasing austerity under Prime Minister Attlee's Socialist government.

More than 300 council seats in 69 Scottish towns and cities, one-third of the councils in each locality, are at stake.

There is no Conservative Party as such in Scotland, but the Unionist Party is allied with the Conservatives.

Prime Minister Attlee and other government leaders remained silent on the election results, but informed labor sources rejected the suggestion of Lord Woolton, Conservative Party chairman, that the government should "seek another mandate" by calling a new election.

Rebel Demand Defeated
London, Nov. 3 (P).—Commons defeated tonight, 352 to 144, a rebel Labor demand that the government cancel its decree giving it power to divert workers to essential industry.

Soviet Offers 10-Point Plan shall be exercised by the special commission.

Tsarapkin told a closed meeting of the subcommittee that the American plan did not provide for a transitional period and that was "absolutely necessary."

Britain, he said, could not be trusted with implementing the partition because she had "failed" as a mandate power. In addition, he said, the British had announced they would be prepared to carry out the United Nations decisions on setting up the new governments only if the Arabs and Jews agree. The Arabs have announced their opposition to partition of Palestine.

American Proposal
The American proposal provided for a commission of three appointed by the General Assembly, rather than the Security Council, to oversee the direct transfer of power from the British to the new states. Tsarapkin said he could "not agree" to the General Assembly participation, and insisted that the Security Council supervise it.

His proposals made no provisions for an international police force. Some delegates said they wanted to know what would happen if violence occurs, as threatened by the Arabs, and the local militias are unable to cope with the situation.

In that event, they said, the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China—the Big Five powers of the Security Council—might be called on to send troops. Guatemala has submitted a proposal that the small nations on the Security Council be called upon for troops in that event, to police the violence.

The United States and Russia agreed to iron out differences in their plan by meeting with Guatemala.

Paper Charges America Plots 'Cold Anschluss'

Copyright, 1947, N. Y. Herald Tribune
Vienna, Nov. 3.—Apparently in an effort to head off extension of the United States campaign against communism in Germany, the Soviet army and Communist press here have unleashed the most violent anti-American campaign of the 30 months of occupation.

It distorted innuendoes and openly assailed the United States in Vienna and the provinces over the weekend. The Red army newspaper presented as its most serious accusation the charge that the United States is preparing a "cold anchluss" of western Austria with the Anglo-American zones in Germany. The American-sponsored newspaper in Vienna, Wiener Kurier, struck back with forcible denunciation of the charges and headlined reports that Russian soldiers were responsible for the mass murder of 11 persons, including 6 children in the Soviet zone.

Among some two dozen Austrians interrogated at random today the substantive reply was, "That's what preceded the war in 1939. Germany and the Allies indulged in the same kind of attacks."

U. S. Licensed Paper Recalls Accord in '39
Berlin, Nov. 3 (P).—The United States licensed Berlin newspaper, Der Abend, published today a two-column picture of Generalissimo Stalin and the late Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop smiling together over the Soviet-German friendship pact in 1939.

The American propaganda counter-offensive against communism appeared to be well launched. Underneath the picture was another of Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov walking down a Berlin street with Ribbentrop and German Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel in November 1940. The picture was taken when Molotov came to Berlin to negotiate with Hitler. Ribbentrop and Keitel were hanged at Nuremberg.

Many Germans read for the first time the details of the secret treaty signed by Germany and Russia at the time of the non-aggression pact, setting up German and Russian spheres of interest in Eastern Europe.

Briton Denies Reds' Charge
Moscow, Nov. 3 (P).—Pravda published today a letter from four workers in a guarded Moscow factory declaring a "person in a torn sheepskin coat" discovered photographing the factory turned out to be Maj. Gen. R. Hilton, the British military attaché in Moscow.

The letter said Hilton ran, was caught, and then denied he had a camera, or was taking pictures. It quoted him as saying he was looking for a place to sit.

(The British Foreign Office said Hilton was "detained for a short time" last Thursday.)

("We can say quite definitely that he was not in possession of a camera," said a Foreign Office spokesman in London.)

(Asked whether any protest had been lodged, the spokesman replied: "We regard it as a purely local matter and any action that is taken will be taken locally.")

(The spokesman said he did not know what kind of factory was involved.)

Executed Greeks Receiving Coup de Grace

SEIZED PICTURE—A Greek soldier is shown giving coup de grace to one of four men executed near Athens recently for participating in a guerilla raid on the village of Philli, 13 miles from the capital, and for killing an armed civilian. All four were convicted of murder, conspiracy and assisting the Communist rebellion. This picture was seized by Greek police but later released after the Associated Press had protested to the Minister of Public Order.

Mikolajczyk Safe in London
England. He said "so far as I know," those who fled with him are safe. They included his secretary, Marie Hildwicz; Wincenty Bryja, treasurer of the Polish Peasant Party; Korbowski, Bajinski and their wives.

He said he left Warsaw by train on October 20, crossed the country's heavily guarded western frontier and the Soviet zone of Germany, and then proceeded to the British zone. He declined to disclose the point where he found safety there, but said "I first felt safe last Saturday," the day of his arrival.

He said he was wearing the same clothes in which he left Warsaw and produced a shaving brush and razor from a pocket. He said he carried towels in his overcoat.

He would not disclose full details of his flight "because I don't want to compromise the way I came out."

Mikolajczyk's flight into exile was not a new experience for him. In 1940 he escaped from Poland—then under attack by the Germans—through Yugoslavia, Italy and France to England.

He headed the Polish Government in Exile in London during the war years. He returned to Poland more than two years ago at the behest of Winston Churchill, then prime minister, to help form the "provisional government of national unity." He was a vice premier in that regime.

Peasant Alliance Planned
Mikolajczyk said he met with his party for the last time on October 8 and a resolution was passed acknowledging that intimidation had made it practically impossible to carry on as opponents of the government.

Last week Dr. Milan Gavrilovic, a leader of the Serbian (Yugoslav) Peasant Party, said that exiled leaders of several European peasant parties had met secretly to plan a full-scale anti-Communist offensive to be launched as soon as Mikolajczyk reached London.

Yesterday in Paris Karol Popiel, head of the Polish Christian Social Democratic Party, predicted that Mikolajczyk would head an international organization whose aim would be to drive communism out of the Balkan and Slav states of Europe.

U. S. Consulate In Jerusalem Is Barricaded

Jerusalem, Palestine, Nov. 3 (P).—Palestine authorities put the French and United States consulates general inside heavily guarded security zones today and surrounded them with barbed wire as a precaution against attack by groups which resent plans to partition the Holy Land between Jews and Arabs.

A British police agent was killed and three were wounded in a sudden outbreak of Jewish terrorist violence here and in Tel Aviv. One Jewish attacker was killed.

Arab leader Emile Ghoury asserted Arabs were ready to fight it out with Jews for mastery over Palestine.

Violence started with the assassination here by gunmen, believed to be Jewish terrorists, of Sgt. Shalom Guervitz, a Jewish member of the Palestine criminal investigation department, in his home. One suspect was arrested.

Two British policemen were seriously wounded in Tel Aviv when they tried to stop members of the extremist Stern gang from posting copies of their illegal newspaper Hamas.

Another British policeman was wounded by terrorist in the northern part of the city. One of his Jewish attackers was killed.

Authorities took their precautions at the United States and French consulates because of the expectation that U.N. voting on Palestine might start trouble.

Ghoury, prominent member of the Arab higher committee, said the Arabs would be ready for a showdown in six months and that Jewish resistance would be "a physical impossibility."

He said more than 100,000 Arabs were ready to defend Palestine.

U. N. Assembly Rejects Plan For 'Advice' on Territories

New York, Nov. 3 (P).—The United Nations Assembly today rejected a proposal which would have given the U.N. authority to make recommendations regarding non-self-governing territories.

It was one of a series of Russian-supported proposals—which some delegates said during debate would constitute "interference" by the U.N.

The day-long fight was primarily between the countries which rule non-administering powers. The fight was won by the ruling powers in the final vote.

New Zealand delegate Sir Berendsen charged in the course of debate that "votes have been bought" in the Assembly and he also delivered a vigorous attack on "bloc voting."

"I do not mean that votes are bought and paid for in money," he declared, "but votes are indeed bought and paid for with other votes."

"You vote for me in this matter, and I will vote for you in that matter! Votes that are bargained for in that way are not cast responsibly according to the merits of the matter under consideration."

Tax Experts' Plan Disputed by Woll

AFL Member of Knutson Group Charges Program Would Increase Burden of Poor

A strong dissent by an AFL member will prevent a unanimous report by a special committee of noncongressional tax experts studying over-all tax revision for the House Ways and Means Committee.

This was learned last night as a majority of the group prepared to recommend sweeping tax changes, including authority for husbands and wives in all States to split income for Federal tax purposes.

A minority report, submitted by Matthew Woll, vice president of the AFL, will charge that the effect of some two-score tax changes proposed will be to favor the middle and upper brackets, and shift an undue share of the tax load to those least able to pay.

Woll is expected to charge also that majority recommendations disregard needs for European aid and reduce Federal revenues.

The committee of experts, headed by Roswell Magill, New York lawyer and former Undersecretary of the Treasury, was originally scheduled to file its findings with the Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

FCC Accused Of Publishing 'False' Data

Baltimore, Nov. 3 (AP)—A witness for Radio Station WBAL testified at a Federal Communications Commission hearing today that 55.6 per cent of the station's air time in 1945 was sold commercially and only 76.0 per cent was sold in 1946.

The hearing opened today on WBAL application for a license renewal and a request of Public Service Radio, headed by Drew Pearson and Robert F. Allen, that it be permitted to open a new station in Baltimore on the WBAL wave length.

WBAL, owned by Hearst Radio, Inc., is now operating under a temporary license renewal.

Consultant Testifies
The WBAL witness, Paul F. Peter, described himself as a member of a company of radio consultants. He said that in 1945, programs taking 39.3 per cent of the station's air time had "public service" value, although some of those programs were sponsored commercially.

Peter is to take the stand again tomorrow when the hearing is resumed in Washington.

At the onset of the session, William J. Dempsey, counsel for Hearst Radio, Inc., charged the FCC's "Blue Book" published some time ago contained "false" and "discriminatory" statements about WBAL. The Blue Book said that the station had presented insufficient public service programs.

Upholds Blue Book
He demanded that the FCC retract charges against WBAL's operations, and at this point, Rosal H. Hyde, commission member who presided at today's session, denied categorically that any false statements had appeared in the Blue Book.

"There are no findings on record that will preclude the FCC from reaching a fair verdict in the pending case," Hyde said.

Dempsey protested the joint hearing, saying the two matters should be taken up separately, but was overruled.

His attempt to have the hearing postponed while Hearst Radio investigated reports Sumner Welles was connected with Public Service Radio also was overruled.

Emotional Needs Of Children Told To Hearst P-TA

Dr. Katherine K. Rice, District Health Department psychiatrist, told a group of parents and teachers yesterday their major task is to bring the individual child to the upper limit set by his heredity.

Help the child to realize as fully as possible his potentialities, she said, in urging parents to forget heredity and concentrate on environment.

More fundamental to the development of the child than physical environment is emotional environment, she said in an address before the Hearst School P-TA, 37th and Tilden sts. nw.

Emphasizing a child's need for individual care, she pointed out that children who live in foster homes, even though they are second rate, are better balanced emotionally than children who grow up in the best of nursery homes.

Virginia to Probe C. & P. Structure

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3 (AP)—The inter-relationship of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia with its parent corporation, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., will be investigated during a rate study which the State Corporation Commission will begin on Wednesday.

The Virginia company is to appear before the SCC to start presentation of evidence in behalf of its petition for an increase of 25 cents a month for residential telephones and 50 cents a month for commercial subscribers.

The C. & P. Co. estimated these increases, if granted, will produce some $1,440,000 per year in additional revenues. The rate boost is needed, the company will contend, to provide a better return on investment in view of steadily mounting costs of labor and materials.

5 Volunteer Companies Fight Md. Barn Blaze

Owings Mills, Md., Nov. 3 (AP)—Five volunteer companies joined forces early today to battle a fire which destroyed a large barn and seven head of cattle on the estate of Isaac Cate Lyett on the Reisterstown road near here.

Flames could be seen for several miles and attracted the attention of hundreds of motorists.

Candidate Sorry He's Running for 'Such Petty Job'

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3 (AP)—Howard W. Carville, independent candidate for the House of Delegates from the city of Richmond, apologized tonight in a radio address "to every man and woman in Richmond for running for such a petty, chicken-feed position."

"If I win I shall be happy," said Carville, "but I shall be disappointed if I lose. I shall not be unhappy. If I do win it surely would be tough not to be able to run for anything next year."

Carville's closing remark was: "Goodnight, until 1948."

State Department Accused of Giving Bad Name to 7

Attorney Thurman Arnold last night accused the State Department of giving bad references to seven men who never have heard the "loyalty" charges on which they were fired.

Arnold, former justice of the United States Court of Appeals here, gave out a letter that he and his colleagues—former Undersecretary of Interior Abe Fortas and former OPA Administrator Paul A. Porter—plan to send Acting Secretary of State Lovett today.

"As you know," the letter says, "the inevitable result of these accusations thus publicly released is to impair and indeed probably to destroy the livelihood of the accused to make a livelihood. We can discover no way that these individuals can answer such charges."

"The letter said, also, that 'the department has given information to prospective employers, one of them a university, that it has a reasonable doubt that these men are good security risks.'"

The names of the dismissed men have never been given out.

Widow of Slain Man Goes on Trial Today

The trial of 39-year-old Mrs. Katherine Weaver, a Cottage City, Md., housewife, on charges of slaying her husband, Joseph M. Weaver, 43, is scheduled to begin today in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md.

Police have charged that she shot Weaver, a filling-station operator, five times with an old frontier-type Colt in an argument involving another woman. Mrs. Weaver is the mother of two girls, 8 and 20.

Film Quiz Charges To Go To House Floor for Vote

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Contempt charges against 10 Hollywood figures who avoided answering questions on whether or not they were Communists will be laid before the full House of Representatives today.

The full House Committee on Un-American Activities is expected to act this week on a subcommittee recommendation to cite 10 writers, a director and a producer, who said that a congressional committee could not compel them to disclose their "political affiliations."

If, as expected, the full committee concurs in the subcommittee recommendations, the citations could be turned over to House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., for reference to the U. S. District Attorney.

Committee sources said yesterday, however, that the citations will be laid before the full House of Representatives today to indicate the sentiment of the House with a record vote.

It was regarded as entirely possible that the committee would delay asking for House action until more hearings into communism in Hollywood had been held. The committee says it has evidence, including photostatic copies of Communist party cards, on a number of other Hollywood figures.

Action May Be Deferred
Presumably, therefore, others will avoid committee questions.

In order to avoid duplication, the committee may hold up presenting any of the cases until all persons who are believed to be involved have been given an opportunity to testify.

Some members of the committee believe that the case for contempt of the House will be stronger if the House itself has acted.

Hearings were called off suddenly Thursday, after 10 out of 19 "unfriendly witnesses" had been cited by the subcommittee.

The surprise adjournment of the hearings, members of the committee said, foiled a planned demonstration by Hollywood and Broadway figures which might have precipitated a fracas similar to that in Philadelphia Saturday.

In Philadelphia, a group of war veterans broke up a rally called by the Progressive Citizens of America to protest the actions of the House group.

Harry Knabe, commander of Chapter 45, Military Order of the Purple Heart, was quoted in Philadelphia as saying he was to see President Truman at 1 p. m. yesterday to protest the sanctioning of the tally by three Federal judges. Knabe's name was not on the President's calling list, a White House spokesman said.

Proposes March On D. C.

Knabe said he was going to ask veterans to march on Washington to protest the actions of the Federal judges in authorizing the rally after the city authorities had refused to permit the use of historic Independence Square.

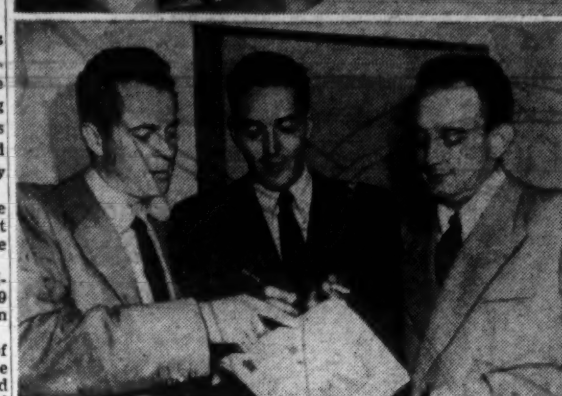

Movie and notables organized into the Committee for the Preservation of the First Amendment to the Constitution, scheduled to appear at the rally, failed to show up.

Top Naval Men Gather Here To Select 23 Rear Admirals

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, and other top ranking naval chiefs from commands scattered over half the world gathered here yesterday for the conferences.

Denfeld visited the White House during the day to give President Truman a firsthand account of the naval picture in the Pacific and Far East.

The Pacific commander is considered the most likely choice to succeed Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, when the latter retires as chief of naval operations December 15.

Rear Admirals to Be Named
Major purpose of the gathering of top-ranking naval chiefs here is to select captains for permanent promotion to rear admiral. Admiral Denfeld heads the selection board meeting tomorrow to go over the records of hundreds of eligibles.

It is the first such board convened since before the war. Among the flag officers here to serve on the board and for informal conferences on other matters are:

Vice Admiral Jesse B. Oldendorf, commander, Western Sea Frontier and Pacific Reserve Fleet; Rear Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commander, Eleventh Naval District, San Diego; Rear Admiral John W. Reeves, commander, Naval Air Transport Service, Moffett Field, Calif.; Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker, commander, service forces, Atlantic Fleet; Rear Admiral Charles T. Joy, commander, Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.

Others on Board
Three other admirals on duty in Washington will sit with them in selecting 19 line captains for promotion. They are Admiral John B. Hoover, president of the naval examining board and naval retiring board; Vice Admiral Robert B. Carney, deputy chief of naval operations for logistics; and Vice Admiral Donald B. Duncan, deputy chief of naval operations for air.

In considering specialists assigned to engineering duty only, Admirals Badger, Baker, and Joy will be replaced by Rear Admiral Roger W. Paine, deputy chief of the Mupptions Board executive committee; Rear Admiral Claude O. Kell, commander of the David W. Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md.; and Rear Admiral Grover C. Klein, assistant chief of the Bureau of Ships.

AAA Convenes Here, Hits Car Sales Abuses

A resolution asking for elimination of abuses in the sale of new and used cars has been recommended by the consumer relations committee of the Automobile Dealers Association.

More than 500 delegates to the AAA's forty-fifth annual convention, which opened here yesterday, heard E. Ray Cory, committee chairman, denounce sales practices "inimical to the public interest."

Cory said his committee found that removal of price controls and the inability of the auto industry to catch up with demand has resulted in:

Ready availability of 1946 and 1947 models on used car lots at prices far above list prices; loading of new cars with unwanted accessories; refusal of some dealers to sell unless a trade-in is offered; ridiculously low trade-in allowances; and, in many instances, refusal to observe any reasonable priority on delivery of new cars.

The committee recommended that the Automobile Manufacturers Association, the National Automobile Dealers Association and the National Used Car Dealers Association, be asked to withdraw franchises from dealers guilty of practices harmful to the public interest.

U. S. Blames Moscow for Peace Delays

A new official summary of United States foreign policy placed blame yesterday on Soviet Russia for failure of the United Nations to "grasp the fruits of peace and victory."

A document prepared by the State Department's division of historical policy research charged Russia with "intransigence," or refusal to compromise, in carrying out wartime agreements.

"A basic aim of the United States," the report declared, "is to press for the necessary treaty settlements which will permit withdrawal of occupation troops from Germany, Austria, Korea and Japan and enable all nations of the world to return as soon as possible to a peacetime basis."

The document is an overall survey of this government's aims and stand on major postwar international issues and is entitled "Aspects of Current American Foreign Policy."

"The Soviet Union, along with the United States, is party to commitments with reference to the demilitarization, political reconstruction and economic unification of Germany," the report said.

"The USSR has failed to implement many of these commitments, however, and has been mainly concerned with extracting maximum reparations from Germany and insuring that a new German political regime shall be 'friendly' to the Soviet Union."

The United States has been concerned chiefly with economic rehabilitation which may render Germany self-sustaining without jeopardizing security requirements and with democratic reconstruction on the basis of free political action by the Germans themselves.

"The United States desires that Germany shall occupy a position among the powers which would give her freedom to cooperate in a broad program of European economic construction rather than to be linked economically and politically with any orbit. The impasse between the great powers in this matter has resulted temporarily at least in the virtual partition of Germany."

"The situation in Austria is somewhat similar. After detailing the deadlock with Soviet Russia in the United Nations on control of atomic energy, the report said that the breakdown of big power cooperation also has threatened the effectiveness of the U. N. Security Council as an organ for maintaining peace.

"The United States has made it clear that it does not desire to stand by while the political and economic fabric of the world progressively decays," the report said.

"Experience has demonstrated that hunger and economic distress breed political unrest and make men an easy prey to extremist ideologies and political tyranny. The situation is made worse when internal economic distress and political unrest are aggravated by a war of nerves from neighboring States seeking to encourage internal subversive movements and threatening to establish political dictatorships."

"To achieve peace it will be necessary to deal with causes of war. The U. S. Government has said it will do what it can to assist in return of normal economic health, realizing that, as Senator Vandenberg said, the United States 'can not prosper in a broken world.'"

In its eight chapters, the report deals with peacemaking and occupation policy, support of free nations, European recovery, international economic policy, dependent areas, atomic energy, conventional armaments and the inter-American system. An initial printing of 50,000 copies was ordered.

NAPOLEON

Armour Urges U. S. Support For Foes of 'Police State'

Detroit, Nov. 3 (AP)—Whether there is to be another world war depends in overwhelming measure "on the success of Europe's free people in resisting 'encroachments of the police state,'" Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour declared today.

In an address prepared for an inter-American luncheon of the Economic Club, Armour asserted: "Who can doubt that if small groups of men who have arrogated to themselves arbitrary power succeed in arranging and dictating the lives of the peoples of western Europe, those men will sooner or later make a major attempt against the freedom of us who live in the Western Hemisphere?"

"The evil system of a group of satellite states under the domination of a great power that manipulates their foreign relations, directly or indirectly, for its own ends, will not meet this requirement," Armour said.

He declared that in the struggle now going on in Europe, he believes the American people already have decided which side they are on and "the only question is how swiftly and how effectively we will use our moral strength and material resources."

He added that "we must act swiftly and intelligently" to help make Europe's recovery good.

The Alexandria City Council will meet in closed session tonight to receive recommendations from a special committee on the selection of a new city manager.

Mayor William T. Wilkins said last night he did not believe final selection would be made at the meeting, but that the council as a whole would wish to investigate the leading candidates proposed by the committee from some 60 applicants.

The city managership has been open since Carl Budwesky resigned August 1. City Attorney Joseph M. Pancoast has been acting as city manager since that time.

Hamilton Quits Finnish Post For Treaty Job

Maxwell M. Hamilton resigned yesterday as Minister to Finland to devote his time to work with the State Department on the Japanese peace treaty.

The White House, announcing the resignation, said Hamilton will continue to hold the rank of career minister. No successor for the Finnish post was announced.

Hamilton has spent 25 years in diplomatic service, much of it in the Far East. He also has served as chief of the State Department's division of Far Eastern affairs and as counselor of embassy at Moscow. He went from Moscow to Finland in 1944.

LARGEST FINANCIAL INSTITUTION IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

"I enclose $250, which I will thank you to place to the credit of Mrs. Madison . . ."

In 1847 Corcoran & Riggs received the above deposit for Mrs. DOLLY MADISON (then in her 78th year) from a discerning friend and Cabinet Officer who requested that his name be withheld.

The following year Congress itself recognized the sad financial plight of the incomparable Dolly, appropriating $25,000 to buy her husband's papers and thus make easier the last days of a beloved American "First Lady."

Doubtless her famous husband (who left a sizable estate) had taken the best existing precautions for her welfare, but there were not then the convenient safeguards for protecting one's beneficiaries that exist today.

The Trust Department of this century-old institution will welcome your inquiry on these vital services. Our trust specialists will help you, and your attorney, to make certain that never for your loved ones need a charitable donor write "I enclose for the credit of."

Film Quiz Charges To Go To House Floor for Vote

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Contempt charges against 10 Hollywood figures who avoided answering questions on whether or not they were Communists will be laid before the full House of Representatives in order to indicate the sentiment of the House with a record vote.

Committee sources said yesterday, however, that the citations will be laid before the full House of Representatives in order to indicate the sentiment of the House with a record vote.

It was regarded as entirely possible that the committee would delay asking for House action until more hearings into communism in Hollywood had been held. The committee says it has evidence, including photostatic copies of Communist party cards, on a number of other Hollywood figures.

Action May Be Deferred

Presumably, therefore, others will avoid committee questions. In order to avoid duplication, the committee may hold up presenting any of the cases until all persons who are believed to be involved have been given an opportunity to testify.

Some members of the committee believe that the case for contempt of the House will be stronger if the House itself has acted.

Hearings were called off suddenly Thursday, after 10 out of 19 "unfriendly witnesses" had been cited by the subcommittee.

The surprise adjournment of the hearings, members of the committee said, foiled a planned demonstration by Hollywood and Broadway figures which might have precipitated a fracas similar to that in Philadelphia Saturday.

In Philadelphia, a group of war veterans broke up a rally called by the Progressive Citizens of America to protest the actions of the House group.

Harry Knable, commander of Chapter 45, Military Order of the Purple Heart, was quoted in Philadelphia as saying he was to see President Truman at 1 p. m. yesterday to protest the sanctioning of the tally by three Federal judges. Knable's name was not on the President's calling list, a White House spokesman said.

Proposes March On D. C.

Knable said he was going to ask veterans to march on Washington to protest the action of the Federal judges in authorizing the rally after the city authorities had refused to permit the use of historic Independence Square.

Movieland notables organized into the Committee for the Preservation of the First Amendment to the Constitution, scheduled to appear at the rally, failed to show up.

The next day members of the committee, including Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Danny Kaye, Gene Kelly, Fredric March, Myrna Loy, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Peter Lorre, Rita Hayworth, Groucho Marx, Paul Henreid and Keenan Wynn, participated in a radio broadcast titled "Hollywood Fights Back."

AAA Convenes Here, Hits Car Sales Abuses

A resolution asking for elimination of abuses in the sale of new and used cars has been recommended by the consumer relations committee of the American Automobile Association.

More than 500 delegates to the AAA's forty-fifth annual convention, which opened here yesterday, heard E. Ray Cory, committee chairman, denounce sales practices "inimical to the public interest."

Cory said his committee found that removal of price controls and the inability of the auto industry to catch up with demand has resulted in:

Ready availability of 1946 and 1947 models on used car lots at prices far above list prices; loading of new cars with unwanted accessories; refusal of some dealers to sell unless a trade-in is offered; ridiculously low trade-in allowances; and, in many instances, refusal to observe any reasonable priority on delivery of new cars.

The committee recommended that the Automobile Manufacturers Association, the National Automobile Dealers Association and the National Used Car Dealers Association, be asked to withdraw franchises from dealers guilty of practices harmful to the public interest.

Top Naval Men Gather Here To Select 23 Rear Admirals

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Three naval aviators will replace Badger, Baker and Joy in selecting air specialists for promotion. They are Rear Admiral Arthur C. Miles, chief material division, office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Rear Admiral Rico Botta, fleet air maintenance officer, Atlantic Fleet Air Force, and Rear Admiral Henry R. Oster, assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

The Pacific commander is considered the most likely choice to succeed Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, when the latter retires as chief of naval operations December 15.

Rear Admirals to Be Named

Major purpose of the gathering of top-ranking naval chiefs here is to select captains for permanent promotion to rear admiral. Admiral Denfeld heads the selection board meeting tomorrow to go over the records of hundreds of eligibles.

It is the first such board convened since before the war. Among the flag officers here to serve on the board and for informal conferences on other matters are:

Vice Admiral Jesse B. Oldendorf, commander, Western Sea Frontier and Pacific Reserve Fleet; Rear Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commandant, Eleventh Naval District, San Diego; Rear Admiral John W. Reeves, commander, Naval Air Transport Service, Moffett Field, Calif.; Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker, commander, service forces, Atlantic Fleet; Rear Admiral Charles T. Joy, commander, Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.

Others on Board

Three other admirals on duty in Washington will sit with them in selecting 19 line captains for promotion. They are Admiral John B. Hoover, president of the naval examining board and naval retiring board; Vice Admiral Robert B. Carney, deputy chief of naval operations for logistics, and Vice Admiral Donald B. Duncan, deputy chief of naval operations for air.

In considering specialists assigned to engineering duty only, Admirals Badger, Baker and Joy will be replaced by Rear Admiral Roger W. Paine, deputy chief of the Munitions Board executive committee; Rear Admiral Claude O. Kell, commander of the David W. Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md., and Rear Admiral Grover C. Klein, assistant chief of the Bureau of Ships.

unwise practices, regulation of consumer credit terms seems to us essential, apart from the fact that such regulation would be a useful if restricted weapon with which to combat inflation. It may be that Congress will experience a change of heart and approve restoration of consumer credit controls in view of the menace of rising prices. Senator Taft has at least signified a willingness to do so and the President's Council of Economic Advisers favors that course. So we still hope for action before it is too late.

Up To Washington

The biggest question concerning the Auchincloss home-rule plan for the District is what the local community is going to do about it. A courageous subcommittee of the House has taken the lead in proposing a completely new governmental system for Washington, and Congress is now waiting to see what the response of the local community will be. It is our conviction that a determined fight for a home-rule charter after the Auchincloss pattern, with such amendments as local citizen groups may agree upon, would have a good chance for success. In all likelihood, however, an apathetic public response would likely leave this very hopeful plan moldering in the blueprint stage.

In our opinion, the first step to be taken is the organization of a large and representative committee on home rule. The nucleus of such a committee is already at hand in the Central Suffrage Conference. But this spearhead needs to be both sharpened and strengthened. We should like to see a home rule committee comprised of the most progressive and energetic leaders of the Board of Trade, the District Bar Association, the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Federation of Civic Associations, the newspapers, the churches, the theaters, the luncheon clubs, the League of Women Voters and every other civic agency interested in better government in this voiceless city. Only a major effort will suffice. It would be the duty of this committee to carry out a campaign for governmental reform such as the city has not seen since Alexander Shepherd led his fiery movement for unification of the District shortly after the Civil War.

The second step, we think, is to bring the District government itself into line with the reform movement. At the hearings before the Auchincloss subcommittee last July the District Commissioners favored extensive reorganization of the local government's administrative machinery. But as to the essence of the present proposal—the election of a District council by vote of the people—the attitude of the Commissioners has been either negative or hostile. Commissioner John Russell Young recently gave the city fathers' policy a farcical twist by saying that Washington's form of government—in which he had urged extensive changes last July—is "the finest in the world."

We think both the President and Congress are entitled to have in the District Building men who are committed to carrying out the reforms in which both are interested. President Truman has emphasized in very positive terms his desire to see suffrage restored to the District. He can most effectively promote this interest by appointing to the Board of Commissioners an outstanding citizen whose chief task would be to work with Congress in giving shape to a new home-rule government. Fortunately, the President will have an opportunity to make such an appointment when the term of Commissioner Guy Mason expires this month. We should not like to oppose a reappointment for Commissioner Mason on personal grounds, for we think he has rendered better-than-average service in a difficult assignment. But the times call for a new regime in the District Building, and we are thoroughly convinced that appointees to the Board of Commissioners from now on should be selected with the aim of promoting rather than obstructing this objective.

Open The Archives: II

Some of our readers may have read on this page Sunday a letter from Senator Thomas of Utah. Senator Thomas, it seems to us, has raised a highly pertinent point concerning the present policy of secrecy concerning the war documents now in the possession of the United States Government. Among these documents are a good many from the Nazi archives, a considerable portion of which fell into British and American hands after the occupation of Germany in 1945. There is no doubt in our minds that these documents would clarify many items of recent history that remain puzzling and obscure. And yet, as Senator Thomas points out, American historians are denied access to these and to many other relevant documents.

The official explanation of this secrecy, according to Senator Thomas, is that the consent of the British government must be obtained before the documents can be released. This, however, seems not to have deterred certain Americans whose official position gave them access to these documents from making use of the material in their published works. One recent example is Mr. James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State, whose book, Speaking Frankly, has confirmed the existence of documents relating Russian ambitions in Greece, Iran, the Baltic States, and central Europe. According to Mr. Byrnes, who is in a position to identify the documentary evidence, it was Molotov's insistence that Soviet interests in these areas be recognized that led Hitler to his decision that Russia must be attacked and destroyed. We do not question Mr. Byrnes' right to make use of this information; we merely suggest that professional historians should have the same right. As Senator Thomas says, an illumination of the relations of Hitler and Stalin before and after the Ribbentrop-Molotov Pact of 1939 is necessary if the American people are to make intelligent judgments concerning future international policies.

Another historical episode equally important and equally in need of clarification concerns the plot of Karl Frederick Goerdeler, former Mayor of Leipzig; General von Beck, former German chief of staff, and various other high-ranking officers and civilians to rid themselves of Hitler and the Nazis in the hope of establishing a provisional government dedicated to the task of seeking peace on almost any basis that would guarantee the territorial integrity of Germany. This was the plot that came to a premature climax in July, 1944, when Colonel von Stauffenberg set off the bomb in Hitler's headquarters in East Prussia. The nature and importance of this plot—dismissed at the time by American and British propaganda as a mere family quarrel among the Nazis—have been better understood since the publication of Mr. Allen W. Dulles' book, Germany's Underground, and of the translated diaries of Ulrich von Hassell. Hassell, one of those who were hanged for complicity in the conspiracy, was a career diplomat who, if the plot succeeded, was to have become foreign minister of the new government.

Various details, however, remain mysterious. According to one story, Goerdeler sent emissaries to Egypt to sound out the possibilities of an understanding with the British. These overtures are said to have been promptly rebuffed. Nevertheless the Soviet news agency Tass circulated the story that the British were attempting to negotiate a separate peace. Another story is that the whole plot was betrayed to Himmler after some of its leaders decided to invite the German Communists into the conspiracy. All this raises the question of what reports concerning the Goerdeler conspiracy were given to Washington and London, and whether there was any communication between either of those capitals and Moscow on the subject.

Romanian Trial

Thanks to the "Voice of America," the letter that Dr. P. Riposanu addressed to Premier Petru Groza through the medium of The Washington Post's columns has doubtless penetrated into otherwise dark Romania. We hope that its contents are being carefully pondered by the Prime Minister. The letter was written in behalf of the great peasant leader, Iuliu Maniu, who is now standing trial for alleged collaboration with the United States. It is the Groza government that has preferred this trumped-up charge against Maniu, and the fear is that the redoubtable peasant leader, who is 74 years old, already has been condemned in the Petkov manner to death. The Riposanu letter is an appeal to Premier Groza, in memory of old times, to refuse to have anything to do with the conviction of Mr. Maniu.

In the light of the revelations in the Riposanu letter, Groza would be devoid of all honor if he lent his name to the condemnation of Maniu. It appears that when the shoe was on the other foot Maniu came to Groza's help. Groza, who is head of Romania's Agrarian Party, was imprisoned during the notorious Antonescu regime, when the Nazis had the whiphand over Romania. Dr. Riposanu, a great friend of both leaders, testifies to Mr. Maniu's "friendly and untiring efforts" in behalf of Groza's release. The others who were jailed with Groza were killed, and when Groza came out of prison, he went with Dr. Riposanu to see Maniu, and, in thanking the latter for his work, declared "no one and nothing shall ever separate us in the future." It is this friendship that Dr. Riposanu recalls for Groza's benefit. May he think over his pledge as his government goes about its work of tying a web around Maniu.

When the Soviet entered Romania, the Russians instructed the Communists always to do the bidding of Maniu, because Maniu was the idol of the people. Up to a point Maniu went along with the Slav conqueror. The trouble was that he did not jump through the hoop for Moscow; for instance, he was not enthusiastic about the new boundary lines and reparations. And, as Russia intensified her tough policy, he became the voice of opposition. This is what constitutes Maniu's "crime," not his alleged collaboration with the United States. When Groza has signed whatever warrant the Soviet decrees for Maniu, it may be Groza's turn to be extinguished. Moscow, at any rate, already has its eye on one of the simon-pure faithful, Gheorghiu Dej, secretary general of the Communist Party in Romania. If Groza's number is up, anyway, surely it is better to die in honor than in dishonor—leaving a memory that will be exorcised by generations of Romanians.

Morgenthau's P. S.

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., tells the refugee story bluntly in the last article of the Collier's series culled from his voluminous diaries. "Officials," he charges, "dodged their grim responsibility, procrastinated when concrete rescue schemes were placed before them, and even suppressed information about atrocities in order to prevent an outraged public opinion from forcing their hand.... They dealt with human lives at the same bureaucratic tempo and with the same lofty manner that they might deal with a not very urgent trade negotiation." Mr. Morgenthau exempts Cordell Hull and Sumner Welles from his bitter indictment, ascribing the difficulties of the task, over-estimated in the niceties of diplomatic decorum—and with too little imagination to discern the vital human issues involved. The British Foreign Office, Mr. Morgenthau makes quite clear, was no better; the preoccupation with precedent prevailed there, too.

The Treasury Secretary's unflagging efforts to get action from the State Department, his urgent and earnest appeals to President Roosevelt, resulted at last in establishment of the War Refugee Board by executive order early in 1944. As Mr. Morgenthau says, "It did a magnificent job. But think what it might have done had it begun work a year earlier!"

Letters To The Editor

Military President

Most of the distinguished columnists and not a few editors have been presenting to their readers the merits of the nomination for the Presidency of General Eisenhower and General MacArthur. In fact, a number of organizations have already been set up for that purpose.

Both of these men have shown executive ability of the highest order. In their public speeches they have condemned war in words that indicate their high moral character.

Had the organization of the United Nations performed what was expected of it and mankind been convinced that an enduring peace had been so founded that there could be no possibility of another world war, then the election of either one of these great generals, as just plain citizens, would be all right. But under existing precarious conditions, which require no argument, it would be a most hazardous step for us to take.

If our leaders are determined to be "tough" toward the Soviet Union, that is different. In that case why go halfway, just nominate Eisenhower and MacArthur for President and Vice President, or vice versa. In the event of another war, they could follow the example of Alexander the Great, Caesar and Napoleon in leading our forces into combat.

That should be sufficient to convince our Russian friends that we distrust them beyond measure, and let them follow their own course.

On the other hand, if we consider the Soviet Union's cooperation with us in the United Nations indispensable to remove all dangers of war, then we must nominate and elect for President and Vice President men who possess the wisdom, the knowledge, the understanding, the tact, the courage and the love for the common man that made Abraham Lincoln great. S. KENT COSTIKYAN, Montclair, N. J.

Stabilizing Crop Values

With 60 years' practical experience in the production of agricultural crops, I suggest that to maintain agricultural prosperity and secure our future supply of essential food commodities, some stabilization is imperative at this time on major crop values.

The present inflation is not due to "farm values." Wheat and corn left the farm at an average of about $2 per bushel. Collectively, these two important crops directly and indirectly through meat, dairy and poultry products, are responsible for about 75 per cent of our food. However, after leaving the farm they become subject to speculation and conspiring monopolistic practices inflating their values beyond reason and above the purchasing power of the consumer.

Only last year our Administration advanced corn 40 cents a bushel over the OPA ceiling to get corn for overseas, without an equal raise in hog values, which is the cause of our high pork and poultry prices today. A farmer who had 1000 bushels of corn could get $1800 cash against $1400 under OPA ceiling prices on his hogs—and the hogs required labor and risk. This policy sent millions of immature and expectant mother hogs to market, destroying our present and future hog products. If the OPA had increased the ceiling value of hogs to anywhere near the $18 mark, you would never have heard of $30 hogs or $1 pork chops.

A similar case affects the dairy industry. "Collective values" paid to milk producers are all out of line with the price of milk. Beef is coming next. Today a veal calf, 8 to 10 weeks old, sells from $160 to $170. No man can get his money back by keeping it two years for beef, so our future beef is gone. Identical difficulties apply to our future milk supply in the slaughter of our potential dairy cows. W. H. MOORE, Prince George, Va.

U. S. And Britain

LONDON—Seven years ago the fate of this city hung in the balance. Only seven years ago and we have forgotten so quickly. We have forgotten how it stood as a symbol and a bastion of all the values that had raised man from the slime through the centuries.

It is the fashion today to write Britain off. You can add up the economic forces making for disintegration and come out with an answer that spells doom.

Some Americans seem to take a friendly kind of satisfaction in the threat that hangs over Britain's very existence. They want to see her humiliated and brought low. This covers McCord's isolationism and the professional anti-Britisher.

Others see in Britain's postwar record only the faults and stupidities

Hearing on Housing Put Off Indefinitely

Gamble said the hearings will be held later and that the postponement was made necessary by the convening of Congress November 17.

Film Quiz Charges To Go To House Floor for Vote

By Mary Spargo

Contempt charges against 10 Hollywood figures who avoided answering questions on whether or not they were Communists will be aired on the floor of the House when Congress returns, it was disclosed yesterday.
The full House Committee on Un-American Activities is expected to act this week on a subcommittee recommendation to cite 10 writers, a director and a producer, who said that a congressional committee could not compel them to disclose their "political affiliations."
If, as expected, the full committee concurs in the subcommittee recommendations, the citations could be turned over to House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., for reference to the U. S. District Attorney.

Action May Be Deferred

Presumably, therefore, others will avoid committee questions. In order to avoid duplication, the committee may hold up presenting any of the cases until all persons who are believed to be involved have been given an opportunity to testify.

Some members of the committee believe that the case for contempt of the House will be stronger if the House itself has acted.

Hearings were called off suddenly Thursday, after 10 out of 19 "unfriendly witnesses" had been cited by the subcommittee.

The surprise adjournment of the hearings, members of the committee said, foiled a planned demonstration by Hollywood and Broadway figures which might have precipitated a fracas similar to that in Philadelphia Saturday.

In Philadelphia, a group of war veterans broke up a rally called by the Progressive Citizens of America to protest the actions of the House group.

Harry Knabe, commander of Chapter 45, Military Order of the Purple Heart, was quoted in Philadelphia as saying he was to see President Truman at 1 p. m. yesterday to protest the sanctioning of the rally by three Federal judges. Knabe's name was not on the President's calling list, a White House spokesman said.

Proposes March On D. C.

Knabe said he was going to ask veterans to march on Washington to protest the action of the Federal judges in authorizing the rally after the city authorities had refused to permit the use of historic Independence Square.

Movieland notables organized into the Committee for the Preservation of the First Amendment to the Constitution, scheduled to appear at the rally, failed to show up.

The next day members of the committee, including Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Danny Kaye, Gene Kelly, Fredric March, Myrna Loy, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Peter Lorre, Rita Hayworth, Groucho Marx, Paul Henreid and Keenan Wynn, participated in a radio broadcast titled "Hollywood Fights Back."

Top Naval Men Gather Here To Select 23 Rear Admirals

By John G. Norris

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, and other top ranking naval chiefs from commands scattered over half the world gathered here yesterday for the conference.

Denfeld visited the White House during the day to give President Truman a firsthand account of the naval picture in the Pacific and Far East.

The Pacific commander is considered the most likely choice to succeed Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, when the latter retires as chief of naval operations December 15.

Rear Admirals To Be Named

Major purpose of the gathering of top-ranking naval chiefs here is to select captains for permanent promotion to rear admiral. Admiral Denfeld heads the selection board meeting tomorrow to go over the records of hundreds of eligibles. It is the first such board convened since before the war. Among the flag officers here to serve on the board and for informal conferences on other matters are:

Vice Admiral Jesse B. Oldendorf, commander, Western Sea Frontier and Pacific Reserve Fleet; Rear Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commandant, Eleventh Naval District, San Diego; Rear Admiral John W. Reeves, commander, Naval Air Transport Service, Moffett Field, Calif.; Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker, commander, service forces, Atlantic Fleet; Rear Admiral Charles T. Joy, commander, Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.

Others on Board
Three other admirals on duty in Washington will sit with them in selecting 19 line captains for promotion. They are Admiral John B. Hoover, president of the naval examining board and naval retiring board; Vice Admiral Robert B. Carney, deputy chief of naval operations for logistics, and Vice Admiral Donald B. Duncan, deputy chief of naval operations for air.

In considering specialists assigned to engineering duty only, Admirals Badger, Baker and Joy will be replaced by Rear Admiral Roger W. Paine, deputy chief of the Munitions Board executive committee; Rear Admiral Claude O. Kell, commander of the David W. Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md., and Rear Admiral Grover C. Klein, assistant chief of the Bureau of Ships.

AAA Convenes Here, Hits Car Sales Abuses

A resolution asking for elimination of abuses in the sale of new and used cars has been recommended by the consumer relations committee of the American Automobile Association.

More than 500 delegates to the AAA's forty-fifth annual convention, which opened here yesterday, heard E. Ray Cory, committee chairman, denounce sales practices "inimical to the public interest."

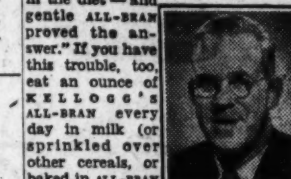

Cory said his committee found that removal of price controls and the inability of the auto industry to catch up with demand has resulted in:

Ready availability of 1946 and 1947 models on used car lots at prices far above list prices; loading of new cars with unwanted accessories; refusal of some dealers to sell unless a trade-in is offered; ridiculously low trade-in allowances; and, in many instances, refusal to observe any reasonable priority on delivery of new cars.

The committee recommended that the Automobile Manufacturers Association, the National Automobile Dealers Association and the National Used Car Dealers Association, be asked to withdraw franchises from dealers guilty of practices harmful to the public interest.

U. S. Blames Moscow for Peace Delays

A new official summary of United States foreign policy placed blame yesterday on Soviet Russia for failure of the United Nations to "grasp the fruits of peace and victory."

A document prepared by the State Department's division of historical policy research charged Russia with "intransigence," or refusal to compromise, in carrying out wartime agreements.

"A basic aim of the United States," the report declared, "is to press for the necessary treaty settlements which will permit withdrawal of occupation troops from Germany, Austria, Korea and Japan and enable all nations of the world to return as soon as possible to a peacetime basis."

The document is an overall survey of this government's aims and stand on major postwar international issues and is entitled "Aspects of Current American Foreign Policy."

"The Soviet Union, along with the United States, is party to commitments with reference to the demilitarization, political reconstruction and economic unification of Germany," the report said.

"The USSR has failed to implement many of these commitments, however, and has been mainly concerned with extracting maximum reparations from Germany and insuring that a new German political regime shall be 'friendly' to the Soviet Union."

The United States has been concerned chiefly with economic rehabilitation which may render Germany self-sustaining without jeopardizing security requirements and with democratic reconstruction on the basis of free political action by the Germans themselves.

"The United States desires that Germany shall occupy a position among the powers which would give her freedom to cooperate in a broad program of European economic construction rather than to be linked economically and politically with any orbit. The impasse between the great powers in this matter has resulted temporarily at least in the virtual partition of Germany."

"The situation in Austria is somewhat similar."

After detailing the deadlock with Soviet Russia in the United Nations on control of atomic energy, the report said that the breakdown of big power cooperation also has threatened the effectiveness of the U. N. Security Council as an organ for maintaining peace.

"The United States has made it clear that it does not desire to stand by while the political and economic fabric of the world progressively decays," the report said.

"Experience has demonstrated that hunger and economic distress breed political unrest and make men an easy prey to extremist ideologies and political tyranny. The situation is made worse when internal economic distress and political unrest are aggravated by a war of nerves from neighboring States seeking to encourage internal subversive movements and threatening to establish political dictatorships."

"To achieve peace it will be necessary to deal with causes of war. The U. S. Government has said it will do what it can to assist in return of normal economic health, realizing that, as Senator Vandenberg said, the United States 'can not prosper in a broken world.'"

In its eight chapters, the report deals with peacemaking and occupation policy, support of free nations, European recovery, international economic policy, dependent areas, atomic energy, conventional armaments and the inter-American system.

An initial printing of 50,000 copies was ordered.

Armour Urges U. S. Support For Foes of 'Police State'

Detroit, Nov. 3 (AP)—Whether there is to be another world war depends in overwhelming measure on the success of Europe's free people in resisting "encroachments of the police state," Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour declared today.

In an address prepared for an inter-American luncheon of the Economic Club, Armour asserted: "Who can doubt that if small groups of men who have arrogated to themselves arbitrary power succeed in arranging and dictating the lives of the peoples of western Europe, those men will sooner or later make a major attempt against the freedom of us who live in the Western Hemisphere?"

"We cannot always wait and drift until the issue is presented on the battlefields of war, or in the form of a Pearl Harbor. The free peoples of Europe, who, though weakened by war and misfortune, stoutly resist the encroachments of the police state are already struggling in our cause."

"The averting of another war, into which the Western Hemisphere would inevitably be plunged, depends in overwhelming measure on their success."

Armour, discussing "European recovery and the new world," lauded the kind of voluntary international system existing in this hemisphere. But he said all such regional arrangements must be consistent with the principles of the United Nations and be free for each nation.

"The evil system of a group of satellite states under the domination of a great power that manipulates their foreign relations, directly or indirectly, for its own ends, will not meet this requirement," Armour said.

He declared that in the struggle now going on in Europe, he believes the American people already have decided which side they are on and "the only question is how swiftly and how effectively we will use our moral strength and material resources."

He added that "we must act swiftly and intelligently" to help make Europe's recovery good.

The Alexandria City Council will meet in closed session tonight to receive recommendations from a special committee on the selection of a new city manager.

Mayor William T. Wilkins said last night he did not believe final selection would be made at the meeting, but that the council as a whole would wish to investigate the leading candidates proposed by the committee from some 60 applicants.

The city managership has been open since Carl Budwesky resigned August 1. City Attorney Joseph M. Pancost has been acting as city manager since that time.

Hamilton Quits Finnish Post For Treaty Job

Maxwell M. Hamilton resigned yesterday as Minister to Finland to devote his time to work with the State Department on the Japanese peace treaty.

The White House, announcing the resignation, said Hamilton will continue to hold the rank of career minister. No successor for the Finnish post was announced.

Hamilton has spent 25 years in diplomatic service, much of it in the Far East. He also has served as chief of the State Department's division of Far Eastern affairs and as counselor of embassy at Moscow. He went from Moscow to Finland in 1944.

LARGEST FINANCIAL INSTITUTION IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

"I enclose $250, which I will thank you to place to the credit of Mrs. Madison . . ."

In 1847 Corcoran & Riggs received the above deposit for Mrs. DOLLY MADISON (then in her 78th year) from a discerning friend and Cabinet Officer who requested that his name be withheld.

The following year Congress itself recognized the sad financial plight of the incomparable Dolly, appropriating $25,000 to buy her husband's papers and thus make easier the last days of a beloved American "First Lady."

Doubtless her famous husband (who left a sizable estate) had taken the best existing precautions for her welfare, but there were not then the convenient safeguards for protecting one's beneficiaries that exist today.

Europe Revisited

MY STRONGEST impression after a tour in eastern and western Europe, and in Germany, is that the Russians have lost the cold war, and that they know it. We, on the other hand, do not know this, and are afraid to believe it, have mistaken the violence of Mr. Vishinsky's language for Russian power, and are, therefore, unprepared to use constructively the opportunity for a European settlement which is closer at hand than we think it is.

LIPPMAN

An analogy from the war will perhaps make clearer what I am trying to say. We made two great mistakes which cost us dearly. First we underestimated the power of Germany and Japan and their intentions, and as a result we were unprepared when war came. Then towards the end of the war we overestimated their power, and were unprepared to make peace. We have learned the lesson of the first mistake, and we have been able, I believe, to check effectively the military expansion of the Soviet Empire. But we have not learned the lesson of the second mistake.

THE COURSE of events in western Europe is demonstrating, not conclusively perhaps but with reasonable certainty, that highly developed countries cannot be captured by Communist propaganda and infiltration. They do not react to hunger, inflation, and the paralysis of government by turning to the Communist Party. They turn to the right, not to the left—to the conservatives, the reactionaries, and in the extreme agony to fascism.

This is what happened in Europe after the first world war, and is happening again. We have been greatly misled by our professional anti-Communists who did not grasp the elementary fact that the Communists are a minority—chiefly an urban minority—who can capture a modern state only if they have an army behind them which will crush the opposition. A Communist Party, which never enlists more than 30 per cent of the people in a western nation, cannot capture the state by strikes and sabotage. It can only paralyze the government and disrupt the social order. But that arouses the other 70 per cent who are not only the greater number but command most of the instruments of social power—the national army, the church, the bureaucracy, the peasants who can withhold food from the cities, the owners of industry and of the liquid wealth of the nation.

A COMMUNIST PARTY, would need the backing of overwhelming military force to overcome this opposition and to liquidate it. In western Europe that is not happening, is not likely to happen—I would venture to say it cannot happen—as long as the Red Army is firmly pinned down at the Stettin-Trkava line. It is now pinned down—not of course by our ground forces in Europe—but by our total power, and the evidence that we have given to us that we know where and how to use our striking forces if the Red Army, or a Tito's army, crosses the military frontier. In retrospect I think we may say that the advance of communism into western Europe was stopped when we sent the battleship "Missouri" to the eastern Mediterranean. That was when the Soviet propaganda became furiously anti-American. It was the realization that the Red Army was outflanked in Europe, and that we knew the way to the vital and vulnerable heart of the Soviet Union.

From then on the cold war was lost for Russia—though we have continued to wage it as if we were still on the defensive.

IT SEEMS TO me reasonably clear that the Kremlin has realized its position at least since last spring.

I learned from several sources, which are probably reliable, that last spring the French and Italian Communist leaders were arranged before a secret tribunal and denounced as failures by one of the highest officials of the Russian Communist Party. They were told that they had collaborated with the Socialists, the Christian Democrats, and the Liberals, and they had failed to bring France and Italy within the orbit of Soviet diplomacy. They were ordered to cease collaborating, and to fight the Socialists and progressives, and to become a more competent and more militant revolutionary party.

The so-called Cominform, the new Communist international with its seat in Belgrade, appears to have grown out of this situation—that is to say out of a belief in the Kremlin that they have lost the cold war in western Europe, and might even begin to lose it in eastern Europe unless they toughened their tactics.

There followed the decision to crush all opposition in their own orbit, and to commit irrevocably the governments of eastern Europe—all of which want to collaborate with the West. I think this was the reason for the execution of the Bulgarian peasant leader, and for the persecution of Manu, Mikolajczyk, and the Yugoslav peasant leader. These actions are designed not only to intimidate the opposition but to make the breach as irreparable as possible between the men who run the eastern governments and the western nations.

OUR OWN greatest danger is that we shall accept a false estimate of the European situation, and of the real alignment of forces, and that as a result we shall be frightened and violent when in fact we should be confident, constructive, and magnanimous. For our real problem is not how to wage the cold war. It has been waged and the decisive moment of it is behind us. Our problem is not how to contain the Soviets. They are contained. It is to push towards a settlement which permits the recovery of Europe and of the world, and to relax the tension, to subdue the anxiety, and to end the panic.

"—And how did you like Hilda's dinner tonight, dear?"

German Policy

By Sumner Welles

Dangers In Unification Now

IT WAS NOT the need for "Lebensraum" it was not economic stress, it was not the encirclement of Germany by enemy neighbors, as the propagandists are again trying to make the gullible believe, that brought on the two world wars. The basic cause was the readiness of a willing German people to march to conquest.

As the time approaches for the Big Four meeting in London on November 25 this simple truth seems to be forgotten.

Except for the Charter of the United Nations, no agreement among the Allies could have been more necessary than a joint policy which could prevent Germany from once more becoming a menace to world peace. Today even the pretense that such an accord was reached at Potsdam has been abandoned. Official Washington is assuming that the United States and the Soviet Union can arrive at no understanding with regard to Germany.

Because of the growing tension between Russia and the United States, which Mr. Vishinsky's egregious tactics in the United Nations have done so much to accentuate, American public opinion, in its obsession with the perils of communism, is losing sight of the German menace. Yet one danger cannot be divorced from the other. The containment of communism depends upon the ability of the United States to obtain a German peace settlement which spells security for western Europe.

IT IS REPORTED that the Soviet Union will propose in London that all occupation forces be simultaneously withdrawn and that the German people be permitted thereafter to elect a central government for a united Germany. That proposal would be effective Soviet propaganda. It would be in line with the tactics initiated by Mr. Molotov a year ago. Should this proposal be adopted, a Soviet-dominated German government would, of course, be rapidly set up in Berlin. Such a government would be kept in power by the "free" German army which the Kremlin has long been training on Russian soil, and the procedure so successfully carried out in Hungary, and in other parts of eastern Europe, would be repeated in Germany.

of any long-range German policy that could result in the establishment of adequate safeguards for the future. It would mean the abandonment of any attempt to provide for political decentralization, for real disarmament, for the imposition of lasting international controls over the Ruhr or for the conversion of the German spirit.

IF WE HAVE any coherent policy for Germany it is not apparent. In Berlin General Clay and his industrialist advisers seem to be determining our policy as they see fit. They openly berate the French government for its efforts to obtain security for western Europe. In their own words, all that seems important to them is "how to get Germany off the backs of the American taxpayers," and how to put the German "bankrupt company" on a profitable basis.

Our policy-makers in Washington, on the other hand, have persuaded themselves that our foreign policy should be formulated as the general staff determines military strategy. They adopt whatever course appears best calculated to offset any immediate Soviet advantage.

In their preoccupation with monetary maneuvers they overlook those long-range objectives which are indispensable if a peaceful and durable world order is eventually to be established.

AN EASTERN Germany controlled by Germany, with the remainder of Germany controlled by the Western powers, means at least a temporary division of Europe, with all of the economic dislocations and political antagonisms which this cleavage implies. But great as the dangers of such a stalemate may be, they are far less than those which would rise from the reconstitu-

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 3 (AP)—Vandenberg (R., Mich.) today advocated a separate peace with Germany if the Council of Foreign Ministers remains deadlocked through this winter.

While granting qualified endorsement to the Marshall Plan, the Senate President pro-tem maintained that "Germany's restoration to viable autonomy is at the core of Europe's rehabilitation. It is infinitely preferable for the Council of Foreign Ministers to come to united terms," Vandenberg said in an address prepared for delivery at a University of Michigan convocation marking the centennial of Dutch colonization in Michigan.

"But I am saying that disagreement—here or elsewhere—cannot be allowed to postpone peace, rehabilitation and self-government forever," he added. "Peace must have priority."

Charter Change Proposed

Vandenberg also urged a change in the United Nations Charter under which the veto would apply "solely to the use of armed force." He attacked "world-wide Communist attitudes which most of us believe are incompatible with peace."

He warned that America "cannot indefinitely underwrite the world."

Finally, he demanded a "totally adequate American national defense" although he added that "I decline to proceed on the tragic theory that war is inevitable."

Vandenberg accused Russia of frustrating economic unity of the occupied zones in Germany in violation of the Potsdam Agreement. "I am unable to believe that a German peace conference could not preponderantly find common ground," he continued. "If the Council of Foreign Ministers still deadlocks this winter, it had better adjourn sine die (without setting a date for reconvening). "The peace conference should be called by those who do agree... to write a practical, reasonable peace for the German areas within its jurisdiction."

Touching on the veto power, Vandenberg said that the Soviet Union "acting strictly within its legal rights, has virtually paralyzed the Security Council by its 20 vetoes."

The issue between east and west, he continued, is underscored by Communist attitudes "incompatible" with peace.

"On the one hand," he went on, "this involves the subversive infiltration of other nations. On the other hand it involves forceful imposition of the rigors of the 'police state' wherever communism gets control."

The Senator demanded to know the "total bill" for the Marshall plan, "including China," adding that "we cannot indefinitely underwrite the world."

U. N. Support Urged

Following a frank canvass of America's resources and under a sound administration with adequate cooperation, he said, he is in agreement with Secretary Marshall's plan to aid Europe.

Vandenberg said he favored a "live and let live world," global disarmament and reliance upon the United Nations eventually to keep the peace.

"But pending reliable evolution in these directions," he added, "I want a totally adequate American national defense. Unshared ideal can be a dangerous delusion. I am opposed to appeasements which aggravate the dangers from which they vainly seek escape."

He urged his audience to continue vigorous support of the United Nations on grounds that "so long as we are talking things out, no matter how angrily, we are not shooting things out."

Wheeler, Patton Death Edicts Upheld by Appeals Court

Death sentences imposed on Reginald J. Wheeler, 27, and Jesse James Patton, 22, for the murder of a druggist in a holdup last year were upheld by the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday.

Patton and Wheeler confessed and were convicted of killing Maurice L. Bernstein when they robbed his drugstore at 1786 Florida avenue, on the morning of June 5, 1946. When tried in the District Court both men declared they were beaten to make them confess.

Justice Wilbur K. Miller brushed aside Patton's claim that he was less guilty of murder because all he did was cover several persons with a pistol, while Wheeler fired the fatal shot.

Justice Miller said that the police did violate the criminal rules of the Federal Courts by holding Patton from 3 a. m. on Sunday until Tuesday without taking him before a magistrate. But the justice said that because of the other facts, this violation could not help Patton, and that the delay did not appear to have caused Patton to confess on Monday night.

There are four avenues of hope left open to the men. They are an appeal to the Supreme Court, the raising of a new issue in a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, a plea to President Truman for mercy and a plea for sanity hearings.

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner spoke for the court in upholding a second conviction, that of Horace U. Boone for the robbery of a downtown hotel of about $80 last September. Boone, too, was arrested on Sunday and confessed before he was taken before a magistrate on Tuesday. He denied that he ever confessed, even though, he said, he was beaten by five detectives.

Voice in Defense Plans Urged For Industry and Science

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP)—Walter Evans, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric Corp., called today for sweeping changes in the approach to national preparedness which would give science and industry equal voice with the military in top-level planning councils. Evans told the National Electronics Conference the United States must modernize its thinking about military procurement to include scientific brains—"along with bullets, and beans, and brawn, and the other measurables"—if there is to be peace in the atomic age.

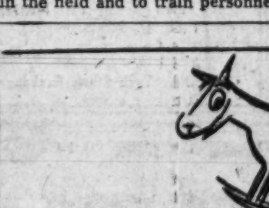

He suggested American security be entrusted to "a great integrated combat team of four triple-threat departments."

There is no reason to believe that the Western powers will fall into the Soviet trap. But what is disquieting is the persistent rumor that the United States, in order to placate German sentiment, will offer a counterproposal, similar to that recently made in the case of Korea, that national elections be held, under United Nations supervision, to be followed by the evacuation of Germany by the occupation forces.

Byrnes' SPEAKING FRANKLY, says, "Mr. Byrnes has served his country ably in an unusually varied range of capacities—legislative, executive, and judicial. But the greatest public service he has rendered is in 'speaking frankly'... The lessons Mr. Byrnes has now so honestly shared with his fellow citizens should bear rich fruit in terms of constructive American action in world affairs."

D. C. Utilities' Nets Off 30% In 9 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined net incomes of Washington's four major utilities aggregated $4,959,078 in the first nine months this year, a drop of $2,161,255 or 30 per cent from the same period last year.

Faced with rising payrolls and increases in other operating costs, two of the four have given notice that they will seek rate increases. They are Capital Transit Co. and Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Washington Gas Light Co. has indicated that it will stand pat on present rates for at least another year, while Potomac Electric Power Co. has remained silent on its plans.

Hardest hit of the four is Capital Transit Co., whose nine-month net income of $245,729 compared with $925,511 in the like period last year. Just last week a 15-cent-an-hour boost was granted retroactive to July 1. The company estimated that the retroactive provision will cost about $500,000, which will put the transit firm in the red for the period.

September and nine-month figures filed with the Public Utilities Commission in the past few days show graphically how the four utilities are faring. The official figures follow:

CAPITAL TRANSIT CO.

TAX STUDY: Financed by a $175,000 gift from the Merrill Foundation for Advancement of Financial Knowledge, the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration will survey the effects of taxes on business. Winthrop H. Smith, business partner of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, announced yesterday the first project of the million-dollar educational foundation of which he is president. It was founded by Charles E. Merrill, directing partner of the brokerage house which has an office in Washington.

ODD LOTS: Washington Gas Light Co. reports meters in service here at end of September numbered 169,417, compared with 187,279 on same date last year. Kaiser-Frazer Corp. announced new production record for October with 18,701 cars assembled, a 13 per cent increase over best previous output. Steel operations this week were estimated at 98.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 97.7 last week. Ward's Automotive Reports estimates November auto production will total 421,800 units, somewhat under October's postwar high of 461,116. One good effect of Department of Justice's filing of suit against 17 investment banking firms was the "smoking out" of some of the ridiculous charges that have been leveled against the industry for years.

"HOLIDAY" TODAY: The Washington Stock Exchange, as well as principal securities markets in New York and elsewhere, will be closed today in observance of Election Day. Banks and building and loan associations here will be open as usual.

SHOE PRICES: Makers of quality shoes in most instances will have to raise prices of footwear scheduled for February and March production, Irving E. Grossman, president of the Guild of Better Shoe Manufacturers, said yesterday. "After this last week's leather spiral, there is no doubt that by the peak of the spring season prices must be higher to the consumer," Grossman said in connection with the guild's main spring openings.

He said if shoes now reaching retail stores were priced on the basis of today's costs, they would have to be $1.50 to $1.75 a pair higher. Leather, he added, has increased in prices 10 to 15 per cent in the past 30 days.

EARNINGS: Atlantic Refining Co. reported net income of $10,836,518 for first nine months this year, equal to $3.60 a share, compared with $4,922,052, or $1.58 a share for same 1946 period. Other income reports yesterday included:

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

PRO FOOTBALL DEPT.—Cecil Isbell, head man of the Baltimore Colts' coaching staff, had a you-don't-know-what-we-go-through story for the Touchdown Club luncheon members yesterday. He said he was speaking for all coaches, college and professional.

"We had a bad time of it a couple of weeks ago when my kicker, John Galvin, got off two bad punts out of bounds against the Los Angeles Rams," he related. "The poor punts set up two touchdowns for Los Angeles, but Galvin was just having an off day. We knew it, and kept our faith in him. Against the New York Yankees on Sunday, we had Galvin in their kicking for us again. He was punting beautifully all day, and what happened? After Bruce Alford of the Yankees ran back our opening kick-off 83 yards for a touchdown, Buddy Young took one of Galvin's punts and returned it 53 yards. A little while later Spec Sanders grabbed another one and ran it back 44 yards. "Just about that time, it was getting so bad that I was wishing I'd get a break and get some of our punts blocked. It wouldn't be as dangerous."

VIRGINIA DEPT.—Those unbeaten Virginia Cavaliers coached by Art Gueppie are going to set one record Saturday whether or not they win or lose from unbeaten Penn at Franklin Field. They're going to play before the largest crowd that ever saw a Virginia football team perform.

At Penn, they're now anticipating a gate of 75,000 for the invasion by Virginia. That's only 5000 fewer than saw Penn-Navy, and it's 5000 more than the Penn-Columbia game drew. But the Penn athletic treasurers are not exactly happy about the situation. The Penn people never expected that Virginia would come up to the game unbeaten, with a chance to knock the Quakers off. It was supposed to be something of a breather. So the tickets were priced at $2.60 tops, in contrast to the $3.90 for the Navy and Columbia games. Unwittingly, Penn gave its fans a bargain attraction.

On Saturday for the first time, Penn will be playing a team that has as many good backs as Penn, maybe more. The Quakers have snowed everybody under with their seemingly limitless array of backs, but at Virginia the good backs are reported to be no less than nine deep. It should be an interesting afternoon.

NOTRE DAME DEPT.—As usual there is the suspicion that Notre Dame pulled its punches in the 27-0 defeat of Navy last weekend, but never were the charges so empty. The Irish scored every touchdown they could, and that they were trying was evident in the last minute of the first half.

With a 14-0 lead and Notre Dame in Navy territory with 40 seconds to play, Coach Frank Leahy obviously was trying to pour it on. Else why did he rout Johnny Lujack off the bench and send him into the backfield? Lujack took 'em to Navy's 1-yard line before the Irish lost the ball. Notre Dame wasn't letting up on anybody.

The Irish figure to cream the Army football team next Saturday at South Bend, and there will be no suspicion that Leahy tried to keep the score down. It's the breaking point in relations with Army, anyway, with no games scheduled for future years and no call for the Irish to be nice to the Cadets.

Still pretty vivid with Notre Dame folks are the games of 1944-45 when Army poured it on 59-0 and 48-0 against war-ridden Irish teams. The Irish won't be completely happy with anything less than 60 points on Saturday.

MORE NOTRE DAME—The Irish line was actually outplayed by Navy's line over long stretches of Saturday's game at Cleveland, and unless Notre Dame's passing attack can lift the whole team into the super class, you'd have to say it isn't one of the better Notre Dame teams that is rocking along unbeaten to date.

In fact, it's one of the weakest running attacks ever fielded by Notre Dame, lacking a break-away runner in any spot. The best ball carrier on the club is Lujack and he's too occupied with his passing to double up. Frank Leahy's early-season moaning about his lack of a sharp fullback was apparently justified.

But when it comes to forward passing, there's doubt if any college team ever had it to the degree of the Irish. No longer do Notre Dame men mention Angelo Bertelli in the same breath with Lujack as a passer, and Bertelli never had receivers to compare with the present Irish crop. The whole Irish passing game smacked of the pros at their best. I don't like Army's immediate future.

Terps, W&M, Virginia Have Eye on Bowls

By Morris Siegel

Post Reporter

THE TIME has come for sponsors of the ever-increasing number of Bowl games to begin making goo-goo eyes at the cream of the Nation's college teams.

The promoters are deep in plans for their January 1 productions and it's no secret that the names of Maryland, Virginia and William and Mary are high on the invitation list even at this date, 57 days before New Year's Day.

Maryland has already received a left-handed bid, more pleasantly referred to as a "feeler," from El Paso, Tex., scene of the Sun Bowl. The Terps, who are riding high with a 5-1 record, weren't exactly knocked off their feet by the invitation.

They merely said "we'll have to wait until the season is over before making any decision and thus left the door open for more callers, preferably of a higher social strata such as the Sugar Bowl or Orange Bowl people.

WITH BOWLS popping up everywhere, Maryland possibly will be the guest of someone, come January 1. They've got Duquesne, North Carolina, Vanderbilt and N. C. State yet to play and should at least break even against this quartet.

That's when the souped-up Old Liners will be ready to talk turkey about their New Year plans.

Not so with William and Mary, however. They're ready and eager right now. They aren't saying so out loud officially, but you can put them down as available.

The Indians have been beaten only once, 13-7, by North Carolina, but their Bowl-conscious publicity man, Johnny Cox, twists a couple of figures around to point out that W&M is better than Carolina. To support his case, he cites W&M's 21-0 pasting of Wake Forest, the same team that trounced Carolina, 19-7.

That's Mr. Cox's selling point at the moment. His strongest argument in behalf of his "invite William and Mary now," however, is that the Indians are likely to romp through their remaining four foes, VMI, W&L, Bowling Green and Richmond.

DOWN at Charlottesville, Va., where Art Gueppie is readying his unbeaten Cavaliers for the big test against unbeaten Penn Saturday, they're talking bowl, too, and it could be that the Old Dominion will have two teams scrapping in bowls.

Virginia has a rugged road ahead. After Penn comes West Virginia, N. C. State and North Carolina. The coaches are looking forward only as far as Philadelphia Saturday, but Cavalier followers are already making inquiries about rail and plane prices to New Orleans and Miami.

The Rose Bowl has become a closed affair, open only to Big Nine and Pacific Coast Conference teams.

The Sugar, Orange and Cotton Bowls are where the next best living is to be found. And just in case a team isn't tapped for one of them, there's the Gator Bowl, the Oil Bowl, the Glass Bowl, the Great Lakes Bowl, the Pineapple Bowl, the Lily Bowl, the Tea Bowl, the Potato Bowl and the Plastic Bubble Bowl.

Villanova Mets Kentucky in Bowl

Cleveland, Nov. 3 (AP).—Villanova College and the University of Kentucky were chosen today as football opponents in the first annual Great Lakes bowl game at Cleveland stadium December 6.

Stephen Suhajek, grand knight of the Cleveland Council of the Knights of Columbus, sponsor of the game, said tonight Athletic Director the Rev. F. B. McKee agreed to the contest by telephone from Villanova, Pa., a short time after Bernard Shively, Kentucky athletic director, signed contracts.

Written confirmation from Villanova is expected tomorrow. Suhajek said, and K. of C. officials will fly to the Pennsylvania school later this week to sign contracts.

Bill Dunnigan took the top prize of $50 for his 242 in the One-Ball event at Petworth.

Tournaments at both alleys will be held next Sunday.

Conn Announces Ring Retirement

Pittsburgh, Nov. 3 (AP).—Billy Conn says he's through with the ring—because he feels old age creeping up on him at 30.

"I'm definitely through. I'll never fight in competition again. I'm getting too old and it's too tough a game. Billy's decision came as sort of a belated birthday announcement. He was 30 last October 8.

The Guy Must Be Hungry

You've heard of necktie tangles, but here's one that the boys must have borrowed from the wrestler's. Joe Mocha of the University of San Francisco, gnaws his way loose from Santa Clara's Jerry Hennessy's finger-tangle for a gain in the U.S.F. Santa Clara game. Hennessy caught Mocha farther down the field and made his second tackle stick. U.S.F. won, 20-8, for its first victory over Santa Clara since 1931.

Lions Meet Bears Tonight

The Washington Lions, back on home ice after a not-too-successful road trip, will meet the 1946 champion Hershey Bears tonight at 8:30 in Uline Arena.

Coach Jack Riley's charges will be out to snap a two-game losing streak which knocked them out of first place in the Eastern Division.

Injuries to Defensemen Jack Portland and Larry Archambault have caused Riley to switch Center Red Raney and Wing Walt Rabey to defense posts for tonight's contest.

Raney and Rabey together with Bud Foley, Pat Wilson and Portland, who is suffering from a groin injury, will attempt to remedy the sagging inner defense which has allowed 14 enemy goals in the last two games.

Archambault, with strained ligaments in his left leg, will be out of action until at least Friday night.

Hershey will arrive loaded with former Boston Olympic stars familiar to Washington hockey fans. Gopie Red Henry, Pentti Lund, Bobby Schurr, Joe Schartz, Mark Marquess and Gordie Bruce, are graduates of the Olympics.

Tonight's game is a replay of the "fogged-out" match, October 17 in which the Bears were leading the Lions, 1-0, when hostilities were called off in the second period. The game will be replayed from scratch.

Sloppy Track to Her Liking

McCreary Rides Miss Grillo to Easy Win In Governor Bowie; Mason Dixon Second

By Walter Haight

Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 3.—The $10,000 Governor Bowie Handicap went the South American way today.

The Mill River Stable's Miss Grillo, showing a distinct liking for a sloppy track, circled her field to win going away by some five lengths.

Second to the Argentine-bred mare, came Mrs. M. P. Schweitzer's front Dixon, four lengths in front of Alfred G. Vanderhill's Halconero in a field of eight.

With Jockey Conn McCreary imported from New York for the event doing the booting, Miss Grillo returned a $4.60 mutual after going 1 mile and 5 furlongs in 2:50 before a crowd of 8974.

The race was run through driving rain and over a racing strip that resembled a canal.

Gambino Is Top Scorer in Nation

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Lu Gambino of the University of Maryland, who's been contending for the Southern Conference football scoring leadership all season, looked around today to find he was not only leading his own league, but is tied for the national lead as well.

Gambino scored three touchdowns last Saturday against West Virginia to bring his seasonal total to 11 touchdowns for 66 points.

This brought him abreast of last week's leader, Darwin Horn of Pepperdine in Los Angeles, who has the same total in one less game.

Only two others are above the 60-mark in scoring. Roy Preston of Missouri Valley (Marshall, Mo.), whose team has won 26 straight, has scored eight touchdowns and 17 conversions for 65 points, and Southern Methodist's Don Walker has accounted for eight TD's and 13 conversions for 61.

Louis Signs, Fight Official

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Joe Louis-Jersey Joe Walcott 15-round bout for the world heavyweight championship at Madison Square Garden December 5 became official today.

Louis, who will be making his twenty-fourth title defense since winning the crown from Jim Braddock in 1937, and Walcott made quick visits to town from their training camps to sign before the commission and make their $5000 appearance deposits.

The champion was accompanied by his manager, Marshall Miles, and Walcott was in tow of his pilot, Joe Webster. Sol Strauss, acting promoter, represented the twentieth Century Sporting Club.

Following the signing the fighters departed for their respective camps. Louis, weighing 216 now, expects to take off 8 pounds or so at Pompton Lakes, N. J., and Walcott is trying to cut his 200 pounds down to 192 at Glenloch, N. J.

Kennett-Kampfer Meet on Mat

Sheik Abed, the Egyptian, faces Joe Montana in a 30-minute special. Jesse James, the local grappler, and Pat Walsh, the Boston Irishman, will oppose Ace Freeman and Steve Gob in a two-man team bout.

Blackhawks Send Bentley to Leafs

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks today swapped Max Bentley, National Hockey League leading scorer the past two seasons, and a rookie player, for five Toronto Maple Leaf players, including Center Gus Bodnar and Forward Dave Stewart.

The other Maple Leafs who will go to the Hawks were Center Bud Poile and Defenseman Ernie Dickens and Bob Goldham. The second Hawk involved was Earl Thomas, rookie forward.

Teal Has 68 To Lead Open

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 3 (AP).—A scorching five-birdie start gave 27-year-old Glenn Teal, unattached Jacksonville, Fla., professional, a four-under-par 68 and top honors in the North and South Open Golf Tournament's qualifying play today.

Pressing him for the lead in the field of 150 were Atlanta amateur Gene Dahlbender and Jim Gantz, Hartsville, S. C., professional, each scoring 33-69.

Washington, D. C. area qualifiers included Ralph Beach, Pikesville, Md., 35 36-71; Harry Greisner, Washington, 34 39-73; Al Houghton, Landover, Md., 37 38-75; Charles Price, Silver Spring, Md., 41 34-75 and Andy Gibson, Baltimore, Md., 37 38-75.

Fifty-two players with scores of 76 or under joined 43 others exempted from qualifying play to make a field of 95 for the 72-hole grind getting under way with 18 holes tomorrow.

Eighteen more will follow Wednesday with a 36-hole Thursday windup over the 6,879-yard par 72 No. 2 course for this $7500 event in its forty-sixth year.

Self's Condition Remains Critical

The condition of Julian Self, 18-year-old Wilson High School football player who was injured Friday, remained "critical," Garfield Hospital reported last night.

The youth was hurt in the Central-Wilson game and was removed to Garfield Hospital. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Self, 4817 36th st. n.w.

Court Fight Doubtful, Says Veeck

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—Just how far the Chicago White Sox want to string along with Leslie M. O'Connor, their suspended general manager, in his threatened court fight against Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler, presumably will be discussed at a meeting of club directors tomorrow.

The meeting was announced by O'Connor, who has done all of the club's talking thus far in his now-celebrated revolt against Chandler's action in suspending O'Connor and the White Sox for refusal to pay a $500 fine assessed for signing a high school pitcher.

What the reigning Comiskey clan, headed by Mrs. Grace R. Comiskey, club president, think about O'Connor's threat to file civil suit to force his reinstatement by Chandler is conjectural.

Veeck Doubts Court Fight

In Cleveland, the United Press reported that President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians said today he doubted if O'Connor will ever go to court in his fight with Chandler.

"Iveek, who sat in on the American League owners' meeting last Friday to hear O'Connor's side of the dispute which resulted in his and the White Sox suspension, said he thought the White Sox director would circumvent court action. If not, he said he believed O'Connor would resign."

(The Tribune president also hit at O'Connor's statements in Chicago, that he had been misquoted in the meeting here and that the American League club officials actually had supported most of his side.)

"That is entirely incorrect," Veeck said. "I will say flatly that six of the seven clubs were strongly opposed to O'Connor's moves and he was told that in no uncertain words. He received little or no support in that meeting."

Despite O'Connor's claims that Chandler exceeded his authority "in interpreting a rule that isn't in the book," the American League has indicated the White Sox will be strictly on their own in any legal action against the commissioner and, as far as League President Will Harridge is concerned, his circuit has only seven members at this reading.

O'Connor Prepares Brief

O'Connor has prepared a brief to start the suit rolling which he says may make public after the meeting of club directors. The White Sox apparently want to blaze away at Chandler in court or call the whole thing off before the major league draft meeting in Cincinnati on November 10.

O'Connor said the American League's action in voting to replace him on baseball's executive council—which Chandler denounced—could not be construed as support of the commissioner, but merely was a league effort to maintain a vote on the bi-major league council.

He contends that the Sox were fined contrary to baseball law, because the involved player, George Zetterman, 18-year-old Chicagoan, is enrolled in a school not affiliated with the National Federation of High Schools, the only group mentioned in the code.

Chandler pointed out he amended the rule to cover all high schools, a procedure which O'Connor argues could not be done without approval of all league club owners.

Moore Returns To Inactive List

Coach Wilbur Moore of the Redskins yesterday carried out a threat and returned Halback Wilbur Moore to the inactive list.

After just two games, his first since being sidelined with a shoulder injury of last season, Coach Moore dispensed with his dual personality in the interests of the team.

"As a player I am unable to give enough attention to coaching," Moore said. "The fact that we lost both games in which I played, by 56-20 and 36-14, has nothing to do with my return to the inactive list."

Out Fishing...

By Jack Bell
WHILE NIMRODS are oling their guns in preparation for the opening of the wild waterfowl hunting season at noon today, anglers still continue the pursuit of black bass which go out of season at the end of this month.

Reports from the Shenandoah River and Tidewater areas of Baltimore indicate that better than fair catches are made. However, the Potomac River is still a disappointment. Our luck has been very poor.

Bass in Lake Tridelpia, near Ashton, Md., are coming to life, and anglers fortunate to have a boat on the lake are making fair catches.

Tidewater pike fishing on the Severn is picking up. However, none of the 15,000 large-mouth black bass planted two years ago in Weems Creek have been located.

The plant was made as an experiment to determine if the black bass would propagate and furnish sport to anglers on the Severn.

Dave Wallace, secretary of the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission at Annapolis, is making an investigation to determine if black bass in the Severn are more than just another "noble experiment."

Anglers fishing the Severn for yellow perch or pike should make a careful note of the location and size of the catch if a black bass is hooked. The information should be reported to Dave Wallace, secretary Tidewater Fisheries Commission, Annapolis, Md., or to this column.

4 SS Chiefs To Hang for War Crimes

Nuernberg, Germany, Nov. 3 (AP).—Four former top-ranking SS (Elite Guard) officers, headed by Oswald Pohl and who constituted the "business brains" of the Nazi concentration camps, were sentenced to the gallows today by an American war crimes court.

Eleven others were given sentences ranging from 10 years to life. The court said the group of 15 was responsible for "wholesale murder, pillage, robbery and looting." Five were acquitted.

Pohl, swarthy former SS lieutenant general, was subordinate only to Heinrich Himmler. When sentenced he stood at attention, clicked his heels and nodded in acknowledgment. None displayed emotion.

Among those sentenced to hang were Maj. Gen. George Loerner, his second deputy, Col. Franz Eichenhalm, and Maj. Karl Sommer.

Dave Wallace, secretary of the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission at Annapolis, is making an investigation to determine if black bass in the Severn are more than just another "noble experiment."

Prison Camp Guard Tells of Shooting 4

Brunswick, Ga., Nov. 3 (AP).—Guy McNabb, 21-year-old Glynn County work camp guard, told today of shooting four Negro convicts who he said headed for him after the camp warden fled at one of them.

McNabb repeated the story told by other defense witnesses about the killing of eight convicts last July 11. He accompanied 27 prisoners back to the camp, he said, after they refused to continue work on a ditch because they were afraid of snakes.

He denied testimony of surviving convicts that he asked some of

Films Are Too Novel

Merely Rewrites Of Best Sellers

By Richard L. Coe

HOLLYWOOD'S PASSION for reading is keenly illustrated, if you'll pardon the pun, by films on the immediate downtown horizon.

Thursday Warner's revives "Anthony Adverse" and the Capitol comes out with "Nightmare Alley." The Columbia will have "The Foxes of Harrow" and "The Unsuspected" resumes at the Metropolitan. "Forever Amber" soon will be succeeded by "Green Dolphin Street" at the Palace and Henry James' "The Aspern Papers" is due at the Capitol the thirteenth as "The Lost Moment."

This fetish for a sure thing which a wide reading public already has accepted, plus the immense advertising value of titles on view in every drugstore, certainly is one of the things wrong with the movies today. In efforts to cover every incident which can be sneaked in under a code that preordains the results of every action, the Hollywood films are becoming merely illustrated versions of best-sellers.

The creation of a movie in terms of a movie is often forgotten in the effort to crowd incident upon incident solely to satisfy members of the book clubs.

By this I don't mean that books shouldn't be turned into movies; some of our best pictures have come from books. But they have been transcribed in movie terms, not in endless stuffing into one film of everything that happened in the original story. The flavor all too frequently has been lost.

The really disheartening result of the films' passion for illustrating the best-seller list is the fact that so many writers at the disposal of the studios, so little original work is achieved. The writers are in Hollywood all right (unless they have taken Henry Shaw's advice and pulled out for the East where they may be allowed to think for themselves), but they are little better than re-write artists.

Surely some of the time and money lavished on creating pretty pictures of the best-seller lists might be spent to more lasting advantage by encouraging the screen writers to create stories for the screen in terms of the screen.

Anthony Adverse's Record

The advertising advantages, to be sure, work both ways. "Anthony Adverse" as a book has gotten a lot of help from the Warner Brothers picture.

Frank Luther Mott's "The Golden Multitude," a study of best-sellers, reports that Hervey Allen's adventure yarn has sold over two million copies, which makes it one of the greatest sellers in the past 280 years. Farrar & Rinehart (now Rinehart & Co.) originally published the book June 26, 1933.

Rinehart has since remarked that had it been published before the depression it would have come out as two volumes. But it was felt a better risk to publish its 1224 pages in one volume for $3, then rather a fancy price for a book. (You might compare that price with a book of similar length at today's prices and you'll discover what's happened to your earning power!)

Once it got started, the presses

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Export Association, announced yesterday the association's European manager has been instructed to start negotiations with the British government for removal of the 75 per cent import tax on American films.

The British government has expressed willingness to consider possible alternatives to the tax, imposed as one measure to help Britain keep its dwindling supply of dollars.

Examining Methods of Civil Service Denounced

Critics Say Tests Do Not Get Best People, Fail in Workers' Credits

MANY OF Civil Service's best friends in Government are damning its examining methods. The gripes and complaints are reaching a clamor point.

Basically, the complainants say the exams don't produce the best people who are tested. Further, that the tests should be redesigned to make them more realistic, and that they should give some credit to war service and temporary employees who have performed ably in their jobs.

Instead, they say, the exams now given are tricky and artificial; that they have little relation to the jobs they are supposed to produce the best people to fill, and that a "test-wise" person with no proved judgment and ability has a much better chance to pass a test than a person who has already proved his ability on the job.

On the latter point, a top Federal personnel official told me:

"My 18-year-old boy with no experience whatever got a grade of 95 on the general clerical test, but I know of a score of efficient and hard-working war service clerks who failed it. The clerical test didn't make sense to me."

The general clerical test is merely one under fire. Others are the junior administrative technician, accounting, engineer, nurse, phone operator, and a host of others. In fact, most written tests, but most of the shooting at the moment is at the clerical exam.

Hundreds of the best clerks, it seems, flunked that test. You can be sure that the agencies will kick up a fuss if and when they're ordered to fire these people who have proved they can do a good job and replace them with unknowns. An Army official made this biting comment:

"Many more tests like the clerical exam will undermine our faith in the Civil Service system. Every operating official in my division says some of his best clerks failed the test, and some of the worst passed it."

Navy officials are provoked over the results of the junior administrative technician test. They say many of their best people who are just beginning to learn personnel budget, and accounting work failed the exam. A Navy personnel official said:

"Civil Service hasn't learned to design its tests to discriminate between the good and the poor in Federal jobs. Their tests aren't geared in with the work war service and temporary employees are now doing. As a result, we're losing many of our best prospects for higher-grade positions."

War service nurses who had to pass tough tests to be registered must now pass a written exam to get Civil Service status. War service phone operators who have had years of satisfactory service were given a two-hour mental test which they must pass to get status.

Civil Service has refused to give credit on its tests to able war service and temporary employees—people who have already proved they can do the job. The feeling is growing throughout Government that this decision was a mistake for the reasons outlined above.

Civil Service people answer the protests against their examining methods by saying they are returning to the higher job standards used so effectively in the prewar years. Also, that they promised everyone who could qualify a crack at the war service and temporary jobs and that promise must be fulfilled.

LOYALTY: The President yesterday approved the names of 18 people to serve on the Civil Service loyalty review board to hear appeals of employees accused of disloyalty. Civil Service President Harry B. Mitchell said the names would be released later this week.

Mitchell and his two colleagues are reported to have asked the President to select a chairman of the board. The President will study the request.

A strong possibility for chairman is reported to be Seth Richardson, a Washington lawyer who was counsel to the joint congressional committee that investigated Pearl Harbor.

ARMY: The Adjutant General's Office yesterday gave exceptional civilian service awards to two of its outstanding civilian employees, Francis B. Driscoll and A. S. Mangione. The Army's Transportation Corps has openings for CAF-3 and 4 stenographers. Apply in Room 4-B-329 of the Pentagon, or call Republic 6700, Branch 7462.

'White Plague' Topic

Dr. Rene J. Dubos of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, will speak on "The White Plague" under the sponsorship of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific fraternity, in Room 101 of the Hall of Government of George Washington University today at 8:30 p.m.

Returnees to Interior Jobs Find Housing Headache Here

AND GLAD OF IT—The United States Fish and Wildlife Service has moved back into the Interior Department Building. Betty Guehrler, secretary to William B. Taylor, chief of the section of operations, Division of Wild Life Refugees, admires some of the furs used in the research. She is holding a silver fox group in her left hand. Others shown are sea otter, coyote, white skunk and mink.

Six hundred Department of Interior employees transferred here in recent weeks from Chicago are finding out how tight the Washington housing situation really is. Brought back are about 180 employees each of the Office of Indian Affairs, the National Park Service and the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Many of the older employees owned homes here in prewar days, selling them when their offices were moved to the Windy City at the beginning of hostilities in 1941 and 1942.

Now they find apartments out of the question, and many are having to buy houses at the inflated prices to get places for their families to live.

Caught in Upswing
"The trouble is, we sold on a low market, and are having to buy on a high one," said Frank G. Ashbrook, in charge of wild fur animal investigation, Fish and Wildlife Service.

Working in an office piled high with cartons, boxes, and furs, but no telephone, Ashbrook said the Government allowed him about $500 and a 7000 pound limit when he moved. Moving alone, he estimated, cost him an additional $500.

He said he came here the first week in September, on his own expense, to try to find a place to live. He arrived again October 21, and found a house at 3104 N. St. NW, only a few days ago.

Before the war, he lived on Winston Dr. in Bethesda, but sold his house when he left.

One of the hardest struck was George M. Paulus, chief of the land and mineral division, Office of Indian Affairs. With a wife and five children, ranging in ages from 1 to 14, he said that "everything takes more cash than I've got."

Comparatively well-settled is Hillary A. Tolson, assistant director of the National Park Service. A "perfect example of a displaced person," Tolson, who has a wife and 2-year-old daughter in Chicago, is now living at the Cosmos Club. Looking for the past three weeks for a two-bedroom apartment, the size of the apartment he had at 3051 Idaho Ave. NW, before 1942, Tolson is more concerned with the office. "I'll take two weeks more to get this place in shape," he said.

60 Bills Face Move for New Rule in D. C. Tomorrow

Measures Affecting Berwyn, Riverdale, Edmonston Put On Assembly Calendar

Maryland's special legislative session will convene tomorrow with some 60 bills awaiting action, although Baltimore's financing problems initiated the off-year meeting.

Most of the bills come under "emergency" category of county needs, but such State-wide measures as revision of the present sales tax structure and the lifting of restrictive controls over roadbuilding funds have been cleared through the State Legislative Council.

Bills given calendar space would allow Berwyn, Md., to increase its tax rate by 25 cents on the $100; permit Edmonston, Md., to borrow funds for streets already contracted for; let Riverdale, Md., float a $25,000 bond issue for storm sewers.

Bill for Road Machinery
Also, a bill permitting Prince Georges County to issue $150,000 in notes to purchase road repair equipment, and a measure to allow the University of Maryland to condemn several lots on which GI living quarters have already been erected.

A bill to guarantee daily food to prisoners of the University, prisoners was admitted for legislative consideration largely on the plea of Senator L. Harold Sotheron, of University Park, Md., Senate majority leader, who termed the present situation "desperate."

Sotheron declared that since the present contract for feeding county prisoners had expired, the county could find no one willing to do it at the present fixed rate of 60 cents a prisoner day. The bill would permit county commissioners to spend whatever they deemed necessary for proper care of the charges.

Charges Profiteering Attempt
The Maryland University bill was designed to end a stalemate between the university and the owner of two lots on which the GI barracks were erected. The university attempted to buy the lot after it was discovered they were erected on ground not owned by the university.

But, said university officials, the owner asked $30,000 for the two which university officials said were normally selling around $500 each. Among measures dealing with taxation matters and the spending of public funds are bills to: Amend the 2 per cent sales tax to make the exemption level at 14 cents; redefine "retail sales" to mean ultimate consumer sales in any quantity, such as to contractors, etc.; limit food exemption to that consumed in "home or residence" instead of "off premises," so as to make collections certain from street vendors.

Elastic Tax Measure
Empower the Board of Public Works to lower either the sales tax, income tax or real estate tax if on June 30, 1948, there is a surplus in excess of the "safety working margin" of three billion dollars.

The exemption level of the "use" tax (retail sales outside the State or merchandise brought into Maryland) at 14 cents.

Allow Montgomery County to levy taxes similar to those of Baltimore County (bill not drafted). Appropriate to the Board of Public Works an additional $40,000 this year to be given to the department of public assistance for its relief work.

Buck, John R. Young And Horan Comment Favorably; Studied By Trade Board

Support for the sweeping Auchincloss reorganization and home rule plan for the District strengthened last night while other developments included plans for immediate consideration of the proposal by the District Board of Trade.

Yesterday Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), chairman of the Senate District Committee; Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.), chairman of the House subcommittee handling the District budget, and District Commissioner John Russell Young commented favorably on the plan.

The board of directors of the trade group, making the proposal the principal item on their monthly meeting yesterday, quickly referred the report to the Committee on the D. C. Form of Government for immediate study and report to the Board of Directors at the earliest possible moment.

Asks Plebiscite Views
John A. Reilly, president of the Board of Trade, explained that this would include recommendations on the "value of the report" and on whether a plebiscite on the planks of the report should be held.

A year ago today, the board sponsored an unofficial plebiscite on District suffrage and national representation.

The newly elected president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, John H. Connaughton, announced last night that he had turned the report over to the federation's local suffrage committee headed by Wilbur S. Finch, president of the central suffrage committee, for a report in time for the federation's next meeting on December 9.

On Capitol Hill, powerful Senator Buck, who, regarded as Washington's unofficial mayor, said that although he has not yet had an opportunity to study the Auchincloss report, he was "in sympathy with the creation of a joint House-Senate committee" on District affairs and supporting the attainment of District suffrage.

Johnston Withholds Comment
Another prominent Senate District Committee member, Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), who has opposed District suffrage in the past, said he would have no comment on the report until he completed a thorough study of it.

Representative Horan praised the Auchincloss report, commending the "broad and comprehensive approach taken." He said three proposals particularly "appealed" to him: The proposed election of a city government, adoption of a fixed formula for measuring the size of the Federal payment and the move to bring the "maverick" agencies within a centralized government framework.

Election of a city government would provide the "link missing between citizens and their ability to demand a responsible government," he said, explaining that this did not indicate any criticism of the present personnel of government.

Best Approach, Young Says
Commissioner Young praised the report as "the best approach I've seen in my time" toward District governmental reorganization, but said he was disappointed that the proposal did not include a provision for national representation.

He also criticized the voting provisions, noting that persons who vote in the states should not be entitled to vote in the District as well, "especially on taxes."

Safe Crackers Get $1200; Thug Mauls Man, 74, for $15

Yeggs Knew Their Business

SKILL PAYS OFF—Ruby Kayser, 1104 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, bookkeeper for the Cherrydale Cement Block Co., 3436 Lee Highway, Arlington, looks over the wreckage of the office safe which was jimmed by cracksmen who obviously were not novices at the game. They got about $700 in cash.

A weekend safecracking job at the Cherrydale Block Co., 3436 Lee Hwy., netted loot worth about $1200, Arlington police reported yesterday.

The haul, according to Charles A. Toon, company president, included about $600 in cash taken from the safe, and an assortment of tools worth about $600 which were removed from the hardware department adjacent to the office in which the safe was cracked.

Detective Jack Conway said the thieves apparently gained entrance to the company office by forcing open an outside door, and after cracking the safe, forced another door into the room containing the tools.

Conway said the thieves must have worked at least three hours to open the safe, which had been ripped open with a crowbar after an effort to remove the lock with a punch apparently had failed.

19 Days Adrift
William B. Hopkins, Jr., Washington radioman who spent 19 days last month drifting in the Pacific, has sworn off the sea for a landlubber's life.

Two close calls in the Pacific, the other while in the Navy, have convinced him there's no place like 218 1st St. SW, with his wife and two children.

Hopkins was one of three American seamen who stayed behind with four powerless minesweepers when their towing tug was forced to cut loose and head for Palmyra atoll for more fuel. When the tug, the Edward M. Grimm, returned, the ships had vanished.

Kept Transmitter Going
The men were rescued by a Navy ship October 13, largely through Hopkins' resourcefulness in keeping a radio transmitter going. They were stopped by Navy planes.

Hopkins still at sea for the Philippine ship company for which he works. Yesterday, his wife, Mrs. Verita Louise Hopkins, proudly read aloud his first letter since those 19 days that gripped American newspaper readers as dispatches told of the men's disappearance and finally their rescue.

Description Fits Assailant Who Beat and Robbed Government Girl

A 74-year-old man was savagely mauled by a footpad, police reported yesterday, only five blocks from where a Government girl was beaten and robbed early Friday.

The latest victim was William E. Brown of 2121 H St. NW, 40 years secretary-treasurer of the West End Citizens Association.

Brown was yanked, dragged 50 feet into an alley in the 2000 block of 1st St. NW, then pummeled into a dazed condition about 10 p. m. Sunday by a thug who escaped with a wallet containing $15. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises of face and head.

Brown's description of his assailant coincided with the description given by Friday's victim—a Negro of about 30, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds, dressed in dark clothes and brown hat.

The earlier victim, Miss Violet M. Brown, 27, of 1900 F St. NW, no relative to William, suffered a broken arm when beaten in the 1800 block of F St. NW, Friday morning.

Miss Brown, returning from work at the State Department, was attacked with a 31-inch iron pipe and robbed of $100.

Miss Allene W. Robinson, 35, of 1307 Stevens Rd. SE, reported to police her purse containing $113 was snatched from her shortly before midnight Sunday by a youth at Wade and Stevens Sts. SE.

Some $250 was stolen from a bedroom dresser drawer early yesterday at 1257 22d St. NW, Samuel Leventhal, 39, grocery store proprietor, complained to police.

James P. Jackson, 54, reported theft of more than $380 from his room at the Dunbar Hotel, 2015 15th St. NW.

An adding machine, meat and beer valued at $123 were stolen from a grocery store at 2705 Nichols Ave. SE, Sam Rolph, proprietor, yesterday reported to police.

Man Returned To Lorton on Parole Charge

A 24-year-old parole violator, arrested here on a housebreaking charge, was returned to Lorton Reformatory to complete his sentence yesterday, following his arraignment in Municipal Court.

Police identified him as Roland Arthur Williams, 24, of 2418 17th St. NW. He was released on parole from Lorton last April after serving only half of 12-month sentence for housebreaking.

Arrested Saturday night on the grounds of the Indian Ambassador's residence, 2700 Macomb St. NW, after a chase through Rock Creek Park, he was charged with breaking into the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Miller, 2708 Porter St. NW.

Police yesterday charged him with 12 additional cases of housebreaking, which they said he committed over a period of five months. He admitted most of the cases, they said.

The housebreaking included entering the home of Queen Looze Saecherny, the former Gloria Vanderbilt, 2929 Massachusetts Ave. NW, and the home of Dr. Allan E. Walker, 2924 Cleveland Ave. NW, police said.

High Winds and Rain Whip Washington, Causing Traffic Accidents

Winds of near gale force and persistent rain whipped at Washington yesterday, bringing high tides and a high accident count.

Nearly an inch of rain fell to vanquish any lingering threat of forest fires in parks and timberlands of the greater Washington area.

The winds, averaging a mean 40 miles an hour with gusts up to 52, sent trees crashing on parked automobiles, and, with the rain, made traffic hazardous.

Police said the weather yesterday was a contributing factor in several accidents within the District. Wires were reported downed in two small areas in nearby Montgomery County and one telephone pole was set afire in Rockville, Md.

Two Accidents in 5 Minutes
In Fairfax County, Va., two accidents, five minutes apart and within 100 yards of each other in jured two persons and damaged five automobiles and a truck.

Mrs. Ottilie B. Signell, 42, of RFD 1, Laurel, Md., was admitted to Casualty Hospital at 3:30 p. m. yesterday in "very serious" condition with a fractured back and fractured right leg. She was struck by an automobile while crossing 1st St. SE, at East Capitol in the driving rain.

Police identified the driver of the automobile as Robert R. Padgett, 21, of 207 Pennsylvania Ave. SE.

William Dodson, 24, Fairland, Md., was critically injured last night when thrown from his skidding automobile after it struck a tree on Viars Mill Rd., three miles east of Rockville.

Dodson, who suffered a possible skull fracture, and a passenger, Miss Louise Campbell, 20, Rockville, who sustained a possible skull fracture and scalp lacerations, were taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda. Miss Campbell's condition was said to be good. A third passenger, not identified by Montgomery County Police, was uninjured.

Nina Canfield, 40, of 1305 17th St. NW, struck by a streetcar, was admitted to Emergency Hospital shortly before 11:30 a. m., with possible fractures of the right leg, right ribs and right shoulder. The accident occurred at the Connecticut Ave. and N St. trolley stop.

Police said the woman was running to catch a southbound car when struck by a northbound one operated by John T. Williams, 40, of 1424 A St. SE.

A tree was blown down and across the top of a Plymouth sedan in front of 503 Seward Sq. SE, at 12:15 p. m. Damage was reported slight to the parked automobile, owned by Roy Hale, of 520 13th St. SE, who was visiting friends at 511 Seward Sq.

In a similar accident, a dead tree was blown across the front hood of the parked automobile of C. Stanley Allen, 1600 Ft. Dupont St. SE. The vehicle was parked in the 1100 block of 19th St. NW, at the time. Damage was slight.

Police said the woman was running to catch a southbound car when struck by a northbound one operated by John T. Williams, 40, of 1424 A St. SE.

Data Asked On Rights Of Health Inspector

Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday requested briefs from two attorneys on the right of a health inspector to enter a private home.

His action interrupted a hearing against Mrs. Geraldine Little, 40, of 1315 10th st. n.w., charged with interfering with a health officer in performance of his duty.

Police Pvt. N. L. Dixon arrested Mrs. Little September 10 on complaint of Health Inspector Claude Abney, who was refused admittance to the Little home.

William R. Allen, 31, of the same address, forfeited $25 collateral on the charge in connection with the same incident.

Abney said he was making an investigation at the Little residence of reports she was operating a rooming house. Mrs. Little denied she kept roomers.

Judge McMahon asked Defense Attorney Jeff Busby and Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Kneipp to submit the briefs to him within three days. Judgment in the case will be handed down after the judge's study of the briefs.

A guard assigned to the truck, Robert Powers, 20, of St. Paul, N. C., was beaten by the hijackers and taken with them in another truck on which they loaded the whisky. They fled the truck when spotted by Arlington police.

2 Trapped Selling Fans

This is not the time of year to sell "hot" electric fans, particularly with a policeman as a witness.

Detective Sgt. Irving Lubers told United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday he was standing in a loan office when two men tried to sell the operator four 12-inch electric fans.

The two, Johnnie Williams, 47, of 434 Rhode Island ave. n.w., and Samuel Hunter, 20, of 41 Logan st. n.w., were charged with housebreaking and held for action of the grand jury on $2500 bonds. Lubers charged they stole the fans from a Pullman car.

Much Ado Over Stew

His landlady's chicken stew didn't make much of an impression on Noah Conwell.

Conwell, 40, of 432 L st. n.w., took two chickens home Saturday night and asked the landlady, Mrs. Beattie Clayton, to make them into a stew.

During the process, he told Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott, he drank whisky—then ate the stew. But the incident slipped his mind and he chased Mrs. Clayton's husband, Ellis, with a butcher knife the next morning when the chickens were missing from the kitchen.

Conwell was given 30 days in jail for a $25 fine.

Nally told police he returned home from work shortly before 11 p. m. yesterday, deposited his holster and service revolver in a desk drawer, then left the room for a moment. Rushing back when he heard a shot, he found Pitts slumped, his police revolver lying at the wounded man's side.

Capt. Albert I. Bullock of the Thirtieth Precinct said Nally had been cleared of any involvement in the incident.

Dayhoff Job Upheld

Legality of the appointment of Wilford E. Dayhoff as inspector of weights and measures in Montgomery County was upheld yesterday by F. Barnard Welsh, county attorney.

The ruling was in reply to a charge by Civil Service Commissioner Jo V. Morgan that Dayhoff's appointment was "invalid" because the county commissioners bypassed the merit system in naming Dayhoff at a salary of $2400.

Welsh said the office of weights and measures is established by State law and therefore does not come under the county merit system and is exempt from its provisions.

Associate Justice Edward M. Curran imposed the sentence immediately after a District Court jury brought in a verdict of guilty. Salter snatched the rings from a display tray after he had entered the store posing as a customer, witnesses testified. Federation's Refusal to Seat Woman Scored On Crime Here

The Federation of Citizens Associations has no right to refuse to seat any delegate, a 20-year member of its executive board charged yesterday.

Fred S. Walker, commenting on the organization's refusal to seat a woman delegate from the Kalorama Citizens Association, asserted:

"There is nothing in the federation's constitution which gives it the right to prevent seating of that lady. After an association is formally admitted to membership, it can send anyone it wants as a delegate."

Walker, editor of the "Trades Unionist," and a local AFL labor leader of many years standing, contended the Federation could not deny Mrs. Sylvia Wubnick, the delegate, a seat, even if she were a member of the Communist Party—and there is no reason to believe that she is.

Meantime, Mrs. Wubnick, whose acceptance by the citizens' group was deferred pending an investigation of her alleged "leftist" leanings by the constitutional and rules amendment committee, claimed it "perfectly absurd that one little housewife should create such qualms or fears in such a large, powerful body of substantial citizens."

Citizens' Aid Urged in War At Epiphany Church Today

Greater awareness among District citizens of their responsibility to assist in the prevention of crime was urged yesterday by Police Sgt. John F. Ryan, public relations liaison officer between the Metropolitan Police and the city's citizens' associations.

"We can be only as effective as the citizens permit us to be," he told members of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association at their monthly meeting yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Sergeant Ryan, who is making a tour of local citizens' groups to explain the operation of their police system, gave examples of how citizens can help to curb and prevent crime:

"Don't carry $500 in cash in an envelope pocketbook under your arm, as I have known some persons to do," he warned. "It only invites pickpocketing."

"Don't run away from the scene of an accident, if you were a witness, for fear of the consequences—such as court action. Instead, it is your duty to come forward with any valuable information."

He then pointed out such careless habits as hanging clothes full of valuables over the back of a bedroom chair at night. He explained, "There are a lot of pants burglars in town—the kind that crawl in on their hands and knees."

Negro Ministers Plan Meeting on Steps of Capitol

Philadelphia, Nov. 3 (AP)—Edgar G. Brown of Washington, director of the National Negro Council, said today an estimated 10,000 Negro ministers would hold a national anti-lynch and prayer day on the steps of the Nation's Capitol November 16.

The purpose of the Capitol meeting, Brown said, is "to point up the President's Committee report on civil rights, which recommended passage of a Federal anti-lynch law by Congress." That report was made last Thursday.

Brown said plans for the rally were discussed with 300 Negro ministers here today. The Rev. Theodore T. Phillips of Philadelphia and the Rev. T. E. Huntley of St. Louis were named co-chairmen.

In Letter to Friend

Mrs. Patton Says
Pity Moved Mate
To Slap Soldier

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

GEN. GEORGE PATTON, Jr.'s posthumous articles in the Saturday Evening Post are such attention attracters the famous slapping incident is sure of resurrection and discussion. So it's timely to print a letter from Mrs. Patton to a friend of this department who had written saying she both understood and sympathized with the general's action.

The letter is dated January 8, 1944, shortly after the slapping was spotlighted. We'll start with the P. S. "My husband has written me many times the American soldiers are the greatest fighting heroes in the world." Mrs. Patton wrote:

"My husband's action was prompted by sympathy and pity for the heroes whom he had seen wounded in the hospital and who were trying to get back to duty—and for others who will never go back.

"Ask these men what they think of him and what they think of some of these so-called mental patients who filter to the rear with battle fatigue... Too many people do not realize that a victorious army must be led by a man who is unsparing of himself and struggles against a constant undertow of moral disintegration which is forever gnawing at its roots like Nighogg, the serpent, in the Legend of the Tree of Life."

Philosophy of War

PATTON himself felt he had made only one error in the European fighting. Recalling how one of his armored columns had been driven back several miles, with the loss of a number of tanks, the general acknowledged in one article that it was probably his fault for driving his men day and night to a point where they were too fatigued to meet the Nazi counterattack.

Here are some of Patton's terse statements in the magazine articles which reveal his philosophy about waging war:

"A pint of sweat saves a gallon of blood."
"I believe in fighting until lack of supplies forces you to stop; then digging in."

"It has always been my unfortunate role to be the ray of sunshine and the back-slapper before action, both for those under me and also those over me."

"In war, the only sure defense is offense, and the efficiency of offense depends on the warlike souls of those conducting it."

John Fredericks to Speak Here

THE Women's Club at Bolling Field manages to lure some top-notch speakers. Some 200 wives and widows of Air Force officers are members and the informal meetings, with lectures, take place twice monthly. So far, the talks have been given by Army officers or wives of officers recently returned from overseas. A recent speaker, for instance, was Brig. Gen. Walter E. Todd who was stationed in Russia until a short time ago.

But now the ladies, headed by Mrs. Burton M. Hovey, wife of Brigadier General Hovey, commanding officer at Bolling Field, are planning to swap politics for fashions. They've invited John Fredericks, famed designer of fabulous hats, to be their next speaker November 12.

Though John piles up his income via felts and feathers, he'll probably feel at home in a military atmosphere. For among the decorative suits of medieval armor, tables made of drums, helmets are several suits of medieval armor, tables made of drums, helmets turned upside down, filled with sand and used as ashtrays, and an entrance cluttered with a Civil War cannon!

Anniversary
Celebrated by Jewish Agency

The Jewish Agency for Palestine held a reception yesterday afternoon, at 2210 Massachusetts ave., to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of the issuance of the Balfour Declaration. Guests from diplomatic and residential society were entertained between the hours of 5 and 7.

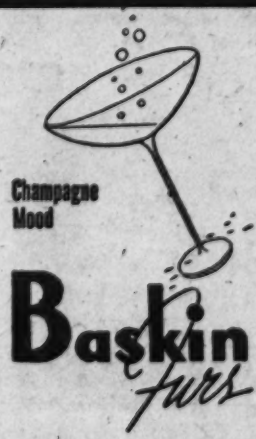

In the receiving line were Elihu Epstein, director of the Washington Office of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, Mrs. Epstein, Moshe Shertok, chief of the political department of the agency, and Mrs. Shertok. Served with cocktails was a buffet of hors d'oeuvres, meats, salads and sweets. Fall flowers were attractively arranged about the rooms and on the walls hung interesting paintings from Palestine.

Celebrated by Jews all over the world, the anniversary of the Balfour Declaration dates back to November, 1917, when the Earl of Balfour, then British Foreign Secretary, issued a commitment of the British government to facilitate establishment in Palestine of the Jewish national homeland.

Among guests at yesterday's fete were the Ambassador of Poland and Mme. Winiewicz, the Ambassador of Bolivia and Senora de Vargas, the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Nieto del Rio, the Minister of Romania and Mme. Rales, the Minister of Uruguay and Senora de Mora, the Minister of France, Francis Lacoste, Senator and Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas, Senator and Mrs. Howard McGrath, the Undersecretary of Labor and Mrs. David A. Morse, and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson.

The Service Set

By Bessie Hackett

BACK in Washington for their third tour of duty —this one is quite temporary—are Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas G. W. Settle, who consider themselves in the lucky class to have found an apartment in the Chancery. The admiral, a native Washingtonian, is the Navy's senior lighter-than-air admiral and until recently was in charge of the Airship Training and Experimental Command at Lakehurst, N. J. Accompanied by his wife, he'll be leaving soon for Turkey, where he's been assigned to carry out the Navy's role in America's aid-to-Turkey program. Their 17-year-old son, Tom, won't accompany his parents abroad—he'll continue his studies at Admiral Farragut Academy, Pine Beach, N. J.

Saturday night the Settles were honor guests at a cocktail party given by Capt. (USN) and Mrs. Franklin D. Kams, Jr., at their home in Arlington. The Settles and Kamses served together in China during the middle 30's and the hundred guests included other Asiatic Fleet "shipmates."

CIVILIAN and Army guests, including the District Commissioners, mingled companionably Friday evening at the cocktail party given at the Army-Navy Club by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. David McCoach, Jr. The host, now vice president of Charles H. Tompkins Co., was formerly Engineer Commissioner for the District of Columbia. Arriving from Philadelphia in time for the party were Colonel McCoach's sister, Mrs. Mabel B. Monahan, and a friend, Miss Carrie Quig, who were weekend guests of the McCoaches at the Wardman Park.

PARTIES AND PERSONALITIES: Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Raymond S. McLain have issued invitations for a cocktail party at their War College quarters on November 7, 5:30 to 7:30. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick H. Smith will be hosts tomorrow to about 60 guests at a cocktail party at Bolling Field Officers' Club. Soon to occupy quarters at Fort Myer will be Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Albert C. Wedemeyer, who'll be moving here from Baltimore following the general's recent appointment as director of the Army's general staff plans and operations division. Getting settled at Bolling Field are Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Howard Craig, who've just returned from Fort Richardson, Anchorage, Alaska. The general has been named one of the three Air Staff deputies. Mrs. Craig has glowing compliments for the Far North but likes the idea of being back in Washington, near her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Stanfill, and grandchildren.

IN JO COPELAND'S
SHORT SLASHED SKIRT

JULIUS GARFINCKEL & CO. REPORTING

Granting that street skirts are two to three inches longer than a year ago, from there on you can have practically any length you wish. Formal afternoon dresses may be twelve or thirteen inches from the floor...

cocktail hems may dip and sweep

... ankle length is adored for lighthearted evenings... and formal evening dresses may cover your toes.

Jo Copeland of Pattullo has another length to offer: a dinner skirt that is definitely shorter than ankle length. It is not only unexpectedly short, it is exceedingly slim—tapered to a fadeaway from the knees

down.

Astonishingly beautiful for candle-lit hours, this copper-hued

rayon satin is a delight to wear for cocktails and on to dinner and the theatre. The passementerie of tiny beads is in the identical copper shade. Wear satin pumps dyed to match, keeping that all-of-a-piece molten metal look throughout. The only possibility of color contrast is in your hair—red, black, blonde.

tions in length... from our ex-

Team Up to Slim Down

By Ida Jean Kain

Overweight in general, and men in particular, cry "health" at the mere mention of a reducing diet and even say it might harm their health to stop overeating. This letter is a fair sample:

"Every time I mention to my husband that he should go on a diet he swears he would starve to death. He is 6 feet tall, age 40, weight 240. How much should he weigh for his age and how many calories should his reducing diet contain?"

Men like figures. So let's have the head of the house take charge of the mathematical part of this reducing program.

All set... A good rule-of-thumb in figuring normal weight is to multiply the number of inches you are over 5 feet by 5½ and add this to 110. That's good weight for a medium frame. Weight should not be based on height alone, but on build. For a stocky build, and we'll take that up to-tional 10 per cent of total weight may be added. (If I seem to neglect the Mrs. now and then in this series, it's intentional. We all know the Mr. needs more prodding.)

Birthdays? After 30 they don't count. When weight goes up after age 30, it cuts down on the number of birthdays you'll have!

Now the calories. A man can lose weight on 1500 to 1800 calories a day; a woman, on 1000 to 1500. These figures are based on requirements for activity and body build, and we'll take that up tomorrow.

Mrs. H. A. Hotchkiss, the matron of honor, wore sky blue satin with a matching hat, and the maids, Miss Elizabeth Inabett and Mrs. James Mazzullo, sister of the bridegroom, were in dusty rose satin with Juliet caps.

David Young was his brother's best man and James Mazzullo and Matthew Young were ushers.

Ida Jenny Catls, cousin of the bride, wearing peach-colored taffeta, served as flower girl. The couple went to New York and Pittsburgh on their wedding trip.

Robinson—Olree

In National City Christian Church on October 12, Miss Jewell Grace Olree, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Olree of St. Louis, Mo., became the bride of Charles Webb Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Robinson of Washington. The Rev. Harry L. Bell officiated and a reception followed at the home of the bridegroom's parents.

Given in marriage by her brother, Harold Olree, the bride wore a gown of white slipper satin and fingertip veil held in place by a coronet of seed pearls. Her bouquet was of white roses.

Mrs. William Capurro, matron of honor for her sister, was costumed in rose velvet and tulle and carried American Beauty roses. Julian Stein served as best man and ushers were Frederick Bates and John Summers.

After a honeymoon in the Blue Ridge Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are making their home in Washington.

Here's the look of beaver, the soft depth, the silver brown lustre. Handled the Saks way, sheared raccoon is a slim rather than a bulky fur — a practical fur with inherent stamina. Here's silhouette news in the '47 manner, with wealth of fullness, tapered sleeves, important new lengths. Above all, sheared raccoon is a youthful fur! At such a welcome price, we think you'll agree it's more of an investment than a luxury.

Japanese Back Liberal Trend In Education, Mrs. Vining Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

FOR the first time in history, Japanese boys are assisting their mothers and sisters with cooking and household tasks. So revealed Mrs. Elizabeth Gray Vining, tutor to the Crown Prince of Japan, in an address yesterday before members of the D. C. League of Republican Women.

The tall, distinguished-looking educator keeps her finger on the pulse of Japan's younger set by requesting her 140 pupils of the Peer and Peers' School to keep diaries.

On the anniversary of the atomic bomb—a date noted by all the older children, according to Mrs. Vining—a Japanese girl wrote in her diary: "Two years ago on August 6, 1945, the first atomic bomb for Japan did explode above the Hiroshima City. And in this moment great numbers of people died by the atomic bomb. I could not believe this cruel incident at the time. But this incident became guide of from war to peace."

"I hated this atomic bomb at the time but few days later the second world war had closed. So I did thank this atomic bomb and I hoped very much all countries of world will not use atomic bomb to all human race again."

Above Average
"Japanese children are great fun to teach," said Mrs. Vining. "They are eager, friendly and intelligent. School conditions in Tokyo, even for the most privileged children, are not easy. There is no heat in the schools and winters are cold. Because of the paper shortage, it is hard to get textbooks. Transportation is very difficult. Some teachers and pupils must spend four to six hours commuting to and from school."

Support Food Drive
At the business session preceding the main program, Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, league president, called upon the organization's members to provide active and business session.

Mowrer Calls for World Government
"The United Nations is so sick that it cannot survive in its present form," declared Edgar Ansel Mowrer, author and correspondent, at a luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday. Mowrer advocated a United World Federalist Government as the possible remedy to the world's tense situation.

"The United States now is in greater state of danger than at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor," he declared. "The world sickness is the atomic bomb."

To remove these particles seems to remove the design and part of the box itself. How can I take off these particles or have them removed? E. M. B.

There's an art shop located in the 2300 block of 18th st. n.w. that does repair work and will probably be able to help you solve your problem.

How can I remove nail polish which was accidentally spilled on new nylon stockings? J. F.

Use acetone or regular nail polish remover to take the spots out of the stockings.

What do you recommend for the cleaning and polishing of leather chairs and teled leather top tables? M. C. S.

Soiled leather may be cleaned either by washing with a special leather soap or with mild soap-suds and a soft cloth. Rinse after-

Time to Mail Christmas Food Packages to Europe!

Only 11 more days left for Christmas shopping if you're sending food packages to Europe! November 15 is the mailing deadline to insure your gift arriving by December 25.

CARE can play SE Nick for you with one of its food boxes. Also, some local stores... Magruder's, Larimer's, Woodward & Lothrop, and others... have gift kits of goodies for overseas mailing. The store takes care of the shipping and the food goes duty free, so you don't have to worry about that. The limit to most countries is 22 pounds, but to a few... Italy or Eire, for instance... it's 11 pounds.

Ready packed boxes of Christmas luxuries, as well as necessities, are offered by the shops... boxes filled with glace fruits, salted nuts, fruit cake, and all sorts of good things, tied up in gay holiday paper. Or you can select the contents of your box from shelves stacked with cans of banana flakes, dehydrated potatoes, butter concentrate, Christmas puddings, orange base (for making orange juice, bouillon cubes, and other concentrated food products. In the meat line, there's canned ham, turkey, whole baked chicken... or, if you want to be really fancy, canned pheasant.

dry with a soft cloth. Always follow washing with a conditioning dressing unless you are using a preparation which both cleans and conditions. There is a product on the market made of emulsified vegetable oils which cleans, softens, and preserves all types of leather except suede.

What will remove iron rust stains from kitchen sink and bathtub? I have just moved into an apartment where the bathtub and kitchen sink evidently were used as receptacles for iron tubs used by the workmen in redecorating.

Daily Reader. Rubbing with a cut lemon may remove the stains but, if they're stubborn ones, you'll probably have to use oxalic acid. Apply a weak (5 per cent) solution of oxalic acid with a paper towel. Rinse off thoroughly after a few seconds. If acid is left on the surface of the enamel too long, the finish will be damaged.

Can you tell me how to crack black walnuts so that they come out in big pieces? I've turned the nuts at various angles, but they continue to break into small pieces. Also, how can I keep the nut meats from getting strong? I. M. W.

As far as I know, there's no formula for persuading stubborn black walnut meats to leave their thick shells intact. People with long practice in "picking out" such nut meats apparently acquire a knack for extracting them in fairly large pieces, but I think it's a skill that has to be developed by the individual. Of course, not using too heavy an implement to break the nut is important, and a quick rap is best so that you just crack the shell open, not mash it. As to storing, keep the meats in a tightly closed jar in a cool, dry place. Warmth and dampness make the nuts get rancid.

Two Brothers Come Home to Parents After Their Marriages Fail; Now Their Brawling Prostrates Mother and They Refuse to Leave

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a world of good. You showed very sick with heart trouble and proper spunk when you told these my doctor has warned me to avoid brawling fellows to find other lodgings. You have been too long here. Now I have done something that is nearly killing me.

I have told my two older sons to leave my home and find themselves another boarding house. I love them dearly and have tried to make them happy, but it's no use.

One is 26, the other 24, and both have been married. They moved back here two months ago, after their wives had to leave them due to their drinking and gambling. Since they came back, my heart ailment is worse and the other day when the doctor said I had to go back to bed, I got mad and told them to go.

If they were out of work, I wouldn't have done it; but both are employed, making $49 a week, and I charge them $8 each for board, which they say is too high.

Often Drunk
And Disorderly

THEY call me a tightwad and are always fussing because I don't order two quarts of milk for each meal, but I can't afford it, as my husband is out of work, our young son, 15, is in school, and I have to feed the family—giving the boys box-lunches—out of this $16 a week.

They get drunk two or three nights a week and now that they can't abuse their wives they pick on me. On payday they get fighting drunk and are meaner than ever. One of them throws my furniture about and has broken two nice pieces.

When I told them to go, they said they didn't have to and wouldn't; that this is their home as much as mine, and now they are treating me like a dog. I can't stand much more. Do I have to put up with this all my life? Was I wrong in telling them to go? Please answer soon. H. B.

High Time Mother
Asserted Herself

DEAR H. B.: You write from the region of moonshine and mountaineers and your elder sons are showing the worst traits of ignorant menfolk in that area.

As you say, they treat you like a dog, which is typical; and doubtless your heart trouble stems in large measure from smothered rage and anxiety, at having been badgered by bullies most of your life.

It is high time you asserted yourself. It would do your heart good. You showed proper spunk when you told these brawling fellows to find other lodgings. You have been too long here. Now I have done something that is nearly killing me.

Throw Them Out
By Legal Means

THEY aren't children; they are able-bodied adults, responsible for their own support, and if they aren't welcome in your home, they don't belong there. If you don't want to keep them any longer, you don't have to. If they won't go peaceably, you may have them legally evicted—and you should.

The average landlord would call the police and have them arrested if they came in fighting-drunk and broke up furniture or otherwise acted mean and menacing.

For advice: Don't waste words, arguing the matter with them. In self-defense and to prove you mean business, see the Legal Assistance Bureau in your community for recommendations on how to file suit for eviction against them.

Court proceedings of this type take about three weeks. They are granted priority over all other types of cases, to give householders protection against disorderly tenants. Hence in about a month you can rid your premises of these hoodlums—with the sheriff's help if necessary, supposing they don't leave sooner of their own accord. M. H.

TOMORROW: Young husband's family is up in arms because he treats his bride as if she were some supreme goddess whose every whim he must gratify.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Your Baby and Mine

Some Children Need Lessons In Chewing and Swallowing

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

One of the distressing habits of the small child is to store food in the mouth, as if it were a pocket, and leave it there until the meal is finished. This is more apt to happen when the foods are the chewy ones for then, instead of chewing, the child packs them away for future mastication or disposal.

Mrs. G. writes, "I have one of those hold-in-mouth babies. You may believe me when I tell you that I have tried every conceivable way to break my daughter of this food-holding habit. 'It is not that she is underweight or sickly. She is quite a buster. Nevertheless, for wear and tear on the nerves I should hate to have this habit continue. 'It is over four months since she started to pocket her food. Her mouth is always open for more food but she just stores it and later spits it out.'"

Show Her How
One way to help solve this is to give the baby a dramatic illustration of HOW to chew and swallow. Then while she takes the small spoonfuls of food say each time, "Chew, chew, chew. Now, swallow, swallow, swallow."

Because it is easier to swallow soft, sieved foods, than chewy ones, I'd go back to the sieved foods for a time and if you give the chewy foods, give them one at a time. Let her hold some chewy foods—toast, bread, cookies—in her hand.

Also, teach her to hold her own spoon and encourage her to feed herself. The passive eater whose food is spooned into her would be more apt to be a mouth-packer than the agile child who is spooning it into herself.

Chevy Chase Club Plans Meetings

Various section meetings this week of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase will offer members first-hand accounts of Indonesian culture and present-day conditions in Europe.

Mrs. James G. McManaway, a member of the club just back from a trip through England, Scotland and France, will report to the drama section today at its meeting at 2 p. m. in the clubhouse. Also on the program will be songs by Virginia Vincier Langford, soprano, accompanied by Dorothy Radde Emery; theater forecasts by Mrs. J. Alan Maphis, and a one-act play directed by Mrs. Harry F. Lowe.

She will display Javanese batik, brass work and wood carvings, which she collected during her three-year stay in Java. The speaker is the author of "Bunk's" a children's story of the Indonesian people. The book is illustrated by her daughter.

"First-hand Report of a Woman's Europe" will be the topic of Ann Hagen, United Press correspondent and home economist, when she speaks at the civics section meeting Friday, 2 p. m. Miss Hagen is just back from a survey of 16 European countries. Her talk is sponsored by the forum committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. James V. Bennett.

D. C. Institute To Help Map Va. Resources

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3 (AP)—The advisory council on the Virginia economy held its first full meeting today and decided to employ the Brookings Institution, widely known D. C. research organization, to assist as consultant in making a survey of the State's economic resources.

In employing Brookings, the council acted favorably on a recommendation of its executive committee. Dr. Lewis Meriam, vice president of the organization, attended the council's meeting in the capitol and outlined various aspects of the work which Brookings will undertake.

Brookings employees are expected to start work about January 1 and continue until April. The institution's fee will amount to at least $35,000.

Before the council's action was taken, Governor Tuck spoke briefly and told its members that if Virginia business interests would underwrite half of the cost of the study he would recommend a State appropriation to cover the balance.

The chief executive stressed the importance of the work and said it should be started as quickly as possible. He appointed the 51-member economic council early in the summer to study means of best utilizing the resources of Virginia to improve the State's economy.

Martinsburg Man Slain; Tenant Held

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 3.—Magistrate King Larkin today issued a warrant charging Earl Mason, 43, with the fatal shooting of his neighbor and landlord, Henry Payne Bryarly, 78-year-old retired farmer.

Mason voluntarily surrendered at the county jail tonight after being missing all day. State police reported.

Bryarly was killed as he undressed last night by a bullet fired through the second story bedroom window.

State Police Corp. A. T. Hodges said Mrs. Bryarly was in the bedroom at the time of the shooting, at about 11:30 p. m., but was frightened to go downstairs to call police for about an hour.

Hodges said Bryarly and Mason had disagreements of several months standing and that Bryarly recently had an eviction notice served on Mason, who lived in a house owned by Bryarly.

Mason apparently drove off early today in his 1931 model car, and drove up to the jail tonight, Hodges added.

Sales Tax in Md. Upheld by Grange

Frederick Md., Nov. 3 (AP)—A resolution passed by the Frederick County Pomona Grange said today it is opposed to any repeal of the State retail sales tax until "some better substitute" is found.

The Grange, at a meeting of 175 delegates, also passed resolutions asking for better detention quarters for juvenile first offenders, and opposing any change of the soil conservation program from the Department of Agriculture to the State Extension Service.

P-TA to Hear Knight

The Silver Spring Intermediate School P-TA will meet in the school auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight. Owen Knight, supervisor of pupil personnel for Montgomery County schools, will speak on "Understanding Our Children."

Your loving vow

When you were just a friend to me... The sky was blue and bright... Because your name became a part... Of every day and night... But when you whispered to my heart... That you were something more... I knew you were the only one... I wanted to adore... Each moment held an ecstasy... Of happiness supreme... And I began to understand... The meaning of a dream... Your words meant more to me than just... Their music soft and sweet... For they expressed a promise true... That made my life complete... And that is why today the sky... Is more than merely blue... And why I want the world to know... That I belong to you.
